Hearst on Conditions in Europe.
Borah Says Save.
Woodpeckers and Elephants.
Gandhi and His Shawl.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

W. R. HEARST, broadcasting on his return from Europe, contrasts foreign insolvency, extending to nations, with our own limited to individuals, while "our nation is sound and solvent."

Suggesting that we keep it so, Mr. Hearst reminds Americans that they have "already lost in the cost of war and in the cost of Europe's repudiated war debts over $38,000,000." He suggests that if we have any more money to spend we "spend it on the pursuits of peace and for the benefit of our own people."

"In England backwardness, slow-going conservatism, old-fashioned machines, methods and men" are offset to some extent, in Mr. Hearst's opinion, by "the modernity of its journalism, a splendid force, impelling the nation to progress."

He admires Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothermere, leaders in British journalism, but does not expect important results from the present British government of compromise.

SENATOR BORAH, reminding the world that armaments cost the world $4,168,000,000 in 1930, suggests that such spending be stopped, for at least five years, among all nations, to let the world get its breath, financially.

Senator Borah's pessimism is revealed in his statement:

"If we can bring this about, it will be about the only advance we are going to make soon."

THE FIVE-YEAR saving suggested by Mr. Borah would amount to almost $21,000,000,000, enough to put the world on its feet, if money can do it.

But, like individuals, nations get the spending habit, hard to break.

This nation could afford to take Senator Borah's advice and set a good example, spending no more than might be necessary to keep its air and submarine defense in line with scientific progress and with other nations.

BETSEY, FIRST circus elephant brought to the United States, had a big monument of wood, on a granite shaft, erected in her honor by Hackaliah Bailey. Only part of the monument remains. Woodpeckers have hacked away the rest, and all will soon be gone.

The "giant pachyderm, cousin of the extinct dinosaur, and own brother to the earth-shaking mammoth," as Bailey's advertising called her, was more fortunate than some monsters of former ages.

Some were destroyed by swarms of rats that gnawed their feet. Dinosaurs were finally wiped out, according to one theory, when dust from volcanoes made the air unfit for their lungs.

It is possible for animals, and perhaps for business enterprises, to become too big for safety.

GANDHI, THE SINCERE, in England with his remedy for all our troubles, finds the world, England especially, "too dumb" to take his advice. He says America does not even want to hear him.

Gandhi understands modern industrial civilization as little as an American automobile engineer understands India's problems, her religious, class and caste hatreds, and all the rest.

In all this worried world, nothing more pathetic could be imagined.

BUT THE WISE English, knowing his hold on 300,000,000 Hindus, will listen gravely, and answer with soft words.

England's misfortune has been adding 100,000,000 to India's population, fighting disease, preventing famine.

If Gandhi had his way, if the British left India, and the 60,000,000 Hindu-hating Mohammedans in India had their way, the extra 100,000,000 Hindus would soon be on their way to Nirvana.

THE HURRICANE in Belize, capital of British Honduras, destroyed the great Catholic College of St. John, and cost the lives of many priests in the college.

Fear that other Jesuit fathers may have been killed in missions far inland, is expressed by the Rev. Joseph Geschwend, editor of "Jesuit Missions."

IN DAYS OF GREATER ignorance, faith in divine goodness might have been undermined by such a disaster. When the great Lisbon earthquake killed thousands, including great crowds that gathered in churches for protection, many are said to have "turned toward atheism, losing faith in everything."

It was believed, then, that every earthquake, tidal wave, or lightning stroke, of which some 300,000 occur on earth every day, was aimed by an angry God, at somebody, or some nation that had offended.

Church bells were rung to keep off tempests, plagues of rats were attacked by prayer, hydrocyanic gas, now used being unknown.

THE PRESENT generation knows that the universe is ruled by laws, unchanging, not by a god, sitting as Jupiter did, on his mountain, with the lightning bolt in his hand, like a savage

RACKETEERS QUIZZED IN MURDER

New York Gangster Sought In Slaying of Yeast Agent In Squirrel Hill Home

While police of three states joined in a manhunt for Joseph Gallo, New York gangster and fugitive, city homicide detectives continued questioning members of Pittsburgh's "yeast ring" in the hope of shedding light on the killing yesterday of Joseph Siragusa, 49, in his Beechwood boulevard home.

Siragusa, district manager for the Empire Yeast Company, supplied one of the most necessary ingredients in the manufacture of beer, according to detectives, and to these known purchasers, about 100 in number, the authorities turned today for possible clues to the slayers.

Siragusa, district manager of the Empire Yeast Company, was "put on the spot" in his home evidently by three gunmen while his wife attended mass in St. Philomena's Roman Catholic Church a few squares away, and his 6-year-old daughter, Katherine, slept in an upstairs room. He was the reputed head of the "yeast racket" and met the same fate as a colleague, Morris Curran, "sugar king," slain June 24.

Joseph Siragusa

TRACED BY LICENSE

Canzoneri, called at his home in Marlboro today, explained that and said:

"You see, so many people come and go here that sometimes I never know who they are. Then I am away often. I knew a Gallo but have not seen him recently. He may have used my name as reference for obtaining his license plates. I don't know."

'UNION' MEMBERS NAMED

Siragusa and Curran supplied two of the most necessary ingredients in the manufacture of liquor and beer and both did business with the same people. Curran's business connections were revealed recently by his secretary, Miss Gladys Ulam, who told of a "sugar and yeast union"

WIFE FACES GRILLING ON YACHT

Prosecutor Doesn't Believe Story of Attack by Pirates; Hunt Man's Body

MINEOLA, N. Y., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—District Attorney Blue, of Suffolk County, announced today he would take Mrs. Benjamin P. Collins aboard the yacht from which she said her husband was thrown overboard by two men and vigorously cross-examine her because he does not believe she is telling the truth.

Blue added that he believed his county had jurisdiction in the matter. He was to be accompanied aboard the yacht Penguin this afternoon by District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards, of Nassau County, who has announced that he believes Mrs. Collings' story.

STAINS ANALYZED

Meanwhile, Edwards announced that stains found on the Penguin, believed made by blood, had been sent to Dr. Schultz, medical examiner of Nassau County, who expected to have his report ready sometime tomorrow.

It was understood Edwards planned to take the Schultz report and other evidence before a grand jury tomorrow and obtain John Doe murder warrants so the power of the investigators might be strengthened.

Nassau County officers, making another search of the Penguin today, found a pair of oars in the tender. One had been broken in three places and the handle was missing. There were no stains on the oars.

HUNT FOR BODY

A hundred boatmen and a number of small yachts put out from Oyster Bay and Northport to comb the waters of Long Island Sound for the body of Collings.

Discovery of the body would establish at once whether Collings had been slain as was supposed from the story told by his wife to the effect that two men boarded her husband's yacht last Wednesday night, threw him overboard and abducted her.

Officials estimated that under

REGISTRATION BOARD CHIEF SUMMONED BEFORE JUDGE

With "all available men" at the Greensburg state police barracks ordered into Pittsburgh tomorrow, the Registration Commission today continued its effort to purge the voting lists of thousands of illegal registrants.

While they were engrossed in this work John K. Morrow, chairman of the commission, received a summons to the chambers of Judge James R. Macfarlane.

He went there with Gen. Churchill B. Mehard, registration counsel, and found Judge Macfarlane, Judge Joseph M. Swearingen, three members of the Allegheny County Bar Association's Committee on Election Fraud, Ben L. Steinberg, assistant city solicitor, and M. B. Lesher, county solicitor, also in the chambers.

Judge Macfarlane's summons for Morrow followed a conference between the Judge, County Commissioner E. V. Babcock and Babcock's secretary, Ben L. Anderson.

SEEN AS MELLON ENVOY

There was no intimation of Babcock's connection with Morrow's summons, if any, although many politicians believed he visited the judge as a representative of W. L. Mellon, protesting the procedure being used by the Registration Commission in its anticipated slashing of the voting lists.

Lesher was the only one of the conferes who would talk after the meeting. He said:

"My only interest was to see that the County Commissioners get the books from the Registration Commission in ample time to deliver them to the polling places as is their duty."

Earlier in the day Steinberg, who, with Thomas E. Kilgallen, another Republic "Organization" attorney, stood guard at the registration office door Saturday night to see "that the Registration Commission does not strike off the names of legal voters, had a private interview with Judge Macfarlane. At its conclusion he said:

"I am morally certain the Registration Commission has stricken off names.

"If I had proof I would present the matter to the court.

"The court order Saturday stated that whatever action was taken was to be done openly, yet the Registration Commission has state police at their doors and will not allow anyone in.

FEAR VIOLENCE

Politicians openly predicted that a wave of violence and disorder will sweep the polling places tomorrow when hundreds upon hundreds of "repeaters" and "phantom voters"—along, no doubt, with many legitimate voters—appear to cast their ballots and find their names removed from the lists.

The state troopers are to make

WARRANT OUT FOR WALSH FOE

A new chapter in the turbulent First Ward battle between Constable Jack Schneider and Paul J. Walsh, son of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, opposing Schneider in tomorrow's primary, was written today when a warrant for Schneider's arrest was sworn out before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court, charging him with violating the election laws.

The series of pre-election disorders which has resulted in one death and a number of shootings culminated early yesterday morning when Constable Schneider's home at 1632 Tustin street, was alleged to have been "shot up" by police, slightly wounding one man. Another, it is said was slugged.

ARRESTS EXPECTED

Arrests of four alleged "Strip" gangsters who are said to have participated in the raid upon the Oakland headquarters of Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong a week ago, resulting in the death of Walter Goliat, their alleged leader, were also expected to be made today by constables from the office of Alderman Luke J. Sullivan, of 2814 Penn avenue.

They are Mark O'Malley, Jack Burke, Edward Nelson and Thomas Hansberry. The information was made by Silas James and William McGraw, headquarters attendants.

The warrant for Schneider's arrest today followed the hearing of Fay Kaiser, 28, and his

LINER SIGHTS OCEAN FLIERS

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Radio reports received here today said the plane in which Willy Rody and two companions took off yesterday for a flight to the United States had been sighted by an American steamer off Bermuda.

Rody, Christian Johanssen and Fernando Costa Viega hopped from Juncal Do Sol, about 30 miles from Lisbon, early Sunday and expected to be in America in 40 to 42 hours. They were reported later to have passed over the Island of Fayal in the Azores.

Their plane is a Junkers all-metal, once owned by Charles A. Levine, and christened the Esa just before the start in honor of Rody's young bride.

Unworried by reports of bad weather over the Atlantic, the fliers made an auspicious take-off.

Weather Bureau officials attempted to dissuade them to forego the flight because of unfavorable conditions, but their words went unheeded.

Kline Blocks Mellon On Harmony Effort

Upsets Program for Armstrong Talk At Coyne Rally

By MARK SHIELDS

Mayor Charles H. Kline, the prodigal son of the Mellon political organization, apparently has upset the efforts of W. L. Mellon to bring about an effective alliance of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong and Senator James J. Coyne as candidates for County Commissioner.

At a Twenty-first Ward meeting yesterday the Mayor not only failed to mention Armstrong, but plans to invite Armstrong to the meeting, of which Armstrong was aware and prepared to follow, were cancelled at the last moment.

FEUD INTENSIFIED

Coming on the eve of tomorrow's election, the action of the Mayor and his associates has intensified the bitterness of many Armstrong followers toward Coyne, and efforts of Mellon to have them turn in for the Senator appear to have been nullified in many sections. Armstrong supporters today declared that it was now apparent Coyne intended to go it alone in territory where that is possible, and help Armstrong only where sympathy for the Commissioner makes that course expedient. They threatened reprisals in kind, with help for Senator Wil-

Voters in Trouble At Polls to Get Free Legal Aid

Formation of a lawyers' committee to furnish free legal aid to any bona fide voter having trouble casting his vote tomorrow, was announced today by Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, candidate for Common Pleas Judge, and Clarence B. Nixon, candidate for County Judge.

Emergency calls can be made in person at the Lindsay-Nixon headquarters in the Law and Finance Building, 429 Fourth avenue, or by telephoning Grant 3730.

20,000 Candidates Running for Office

In addition to the registration of a record-breaking number of voters, 203,998 having enrolled in Pittsburgh and more than 300,000 in the county, there are about 20,000 candidates submitting their names to the electorate tomorrow.

These 20,000 include election board officers, justices of the peace, aldermen, constables and other minor offices.

Pershing, 71, Rests After Birthday Fete

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Gen. John J. Pershing, who was commandant of University of Nebraska cadets here 35 years ago, today rested up after a busy day spent in Lincoln yesterday celebrating his seventy-first birthday.

The general, here for a three weeks' visit with his sister, Miss May Pershing, and his son, Warren, chatted with old friends and became merely an ordinary citizen. He declined appearances, statements and interviews.

U. S. Grants Germany Delay on Payments

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—The United States has agreed to a year's suspension of payment by Germany of the $9,000,000 due American interests under awards of the Mixed Claims Commission. The United States, will, however, pay to Germans $18,000,000 in commission awards.

The French had no objection to the United States paying the Germans, but would not agree to having Germany pay Americans during the year covered by President Hoover's international debt suspension agreement.

Lindys Sightseeing After Hop to Osaka

OSAKA, Japan, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were sightseeing in and around this industrial city today. They arrived here yesterday after a three-hour flight from Kasumigaura Airport, near Tokio.

On the flight to this city they were guided by a plane of the Japan Air Transport Company at Col. Lindbergh's request. The colonel sought the service of a guide plane to avoid the possibility of flying over fortified areas.

'Bounce' Kills Widow; W. Va. Motorist Held

RENO, Nev., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Mrs. Martha Hutchinson, 22, Fairmont, W. Va., widow, was killed on the highway west of here last night when she allegedly bounced from a motor car in which she was riding with Dr. C. P. Andre, former resident of Fairmont. Archbishop Stoned In Liverpool Feud

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—The Rt. Rev. R. D. Downey, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Liverpool, was made a target for stone-throwing while laying a foundation stone in the Edgehill district yesterday. QUARANTINE ON AT WEST POINT

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Officials at the United States Military Academy announced today that Cadet Waldemar J. Thinnes, of St. Paul, Minn., was suffering from infantile paralysis and that "one-way" quarantine was in force at the post.

Thinnes was sent to the post hospital two weeks ago and the quarantine, which does not prevent cadets leaving the Academy grounds and returning at will, but which stops all tourists and visitors entering, was established a week ago. Cadet dances have been canceled and the cadets are holding chapel outdoors.

Heavier 'Balloon' Golf Ball Announced for 1932

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—The United States Golf Association has decided to change the so-called "balloon" golf ball, by increasing its weight, Herbert H. Ramsay, president of the association, announced today. The change will become effective for play on or after April 15, 1932.

Ramsay issued the following statement:

"The association has been carefully studying the golf ball situation since the first of the year in all sections of the country and among all classes of players. The size of the 1.68 (inches in diameter) ball is universally popular. Tests are now being conducted along the line of an increase in weight. A new ball of increased weight will be adopted to become effective for play on or after April 15, 1932. The final weight specifications will be announced next November."

Although no official pronouncement is possible now, the likelihood is that the prospective new ball will weigh 1.62 ounces, the same as the one discarded this year. The present ball weighs 1.55 ounces.

The decision, although something of a surprise, came as the result of an outpouring of protests from the golfing armies.

Mark Twain Scenes Destroyed by Fire

ANGELS CAMP, Cal., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Landmarks immortalized by Mark Twain in his "Jumping Frog of Calaveras" were destroyed by fire, which razed virtually an entire block of this historic mining town yesterday. Exploding gas tanks and ammunition added to the peril. Sheets of asbestos protected telephone girls, who stood by their posts. Damage is estimated at $100,000.

Baby Blimp Chased Home By Weather Threat

The Goodyear baby blimp Puritan, which today flew to Rodgers Field, Aspinwall, from Akron, O., was forced to cut short its visit here because of threatening weather. It beat a hasty retreat homeward at noon.

Piloted by H. W. Crum, the ship arrived here at 11 o'clock, with R. S. Wilson, vice president of the Goodyear Rubber Company, and W. A. Hazelett, eastern district sales manager of the company, as passengers.

It was sent here to promote the Pennsylvania Automotive Association convention, which is to open here October 12.

Officials of the association were taken aboard the blimp for short trips before it returned.

SURVIVORS FLEE HURRICANE ZONE TO ESCAPE EPIDEMIC

SECOND STORM SWEEPS ON BELIZE

Bodies Cremated to Avert Disease Spread; Twelfth American Found Killed

BELIZE, British Honduras, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Fearing serious conditions in this hurricane-stricken city under the threat of water shortage and possible epidemic, the natives are fleeing Belize as rapidly as possible.

Didcier Masson, Belize S. S. Co. manager for Pan-American Airways, who has been assisting in relief work, said:

"The Belize River which was a mass of bodies, houses, wrecked boats and debris for three days, has been partially cleared now and can be navigated by small river craft with expert piloting."

FAMILIES FLEE

"Whole families, or all now left in the families, have been gathering their few bits of personal effects that remained after the storm, are conditioning dug-out canoes or little skiffs and are making their perilous way up river to the little settlements deep in teh jungle which were unscathed in the storm."

Meanwhile a second tropical storm was moving toward the Yucatan Peninsula north of Belize. It disrupted airplane service between the United States and Central and South America.

TOLL OVER 1,000

Fire threatened to complete the destruction of storm and flood today as the work of burying and cremating the dead went forward.

The suburb of Mesopotamia was menaced by flames that spread rapidly in spite of unceasing efforts on the part of soldiers and civilians to block their path. An inflammable liquor warehouse was in the path of the conflagration and fears of an explosion spurred the fighters to frantic measures.

Scores of bodies were buried on five great pyres almost in the center of the once-flourishing city, now in ruins. At least 700 bodies were buried in crude trenches dug in the cemetery by convict labor. Still more bodies floating down river from the interior made an accurate check of the dead impossible. Cremation was resorted to because of the fear of disease.

Discovery of the body of Rudy Lewis, killed with 25 natives on St. George's Bay, brought to 12 the number of Americans known to have been lost.

POOR DIRECTOR CASE HEARD

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 14.—(INS.)—Judge Thomas H. Baldridge of the State Superior Court today heard the appeal for a supersedeas filed by Allegheny County's three Poor Board directors to halt an investigation of the books of the board. He will decide tomorrow or Wednesday.

Attorneys Thomas F. Garrahan and Oliver K. Eaton, representing Maj. J. Clyde Miller, H. H. Dixon and Dr. W. I. Henderson, the directors, argued under the act of 1913 the proposed audit of the poor board's books could not be carried out legally.

Both attorneys contend the law of 1852 providing a board of visitation had become non-operative through non-usage and was superceded by the act of 1913 which carries no provision.

Declaring the public is entitled to know "not what the board is doing with the money it receives," Attorney John Guffilan urged Judge Baldridge to allow the investigation.

PITTSBURGHER FINED IN CANADA

GUELPH, Ontario, Sept. 14.—Thomas M. Jones, 24, identified as the son of a millionaire Pittsburgh industrialist and his friend, Dennis H. France, an Englishman, were fined $25 each, with costs, by Police Magistrate Fred Watt today after they had pleaded guilty to using an automobile without the owner's consent.

According to Police Chief J. A. Rae, the owner of the car, J. M. Gillies, had given Jones and France permission to drive his car from the Homewood Sanitarium, where both are staying, to a Guelph movie.

Instead, they are alleged to have driven to Buffalo, N. Y., abandoning the car. Chief Rae said they then chartered a plane, flew to Pittsburgh, and with two girls returned by plane to Buffalo.

The two were arrested in Buffalo. A charge of grand larceny by Buffalo police was withdrawn and the two were deported to Canada Saturday.

Holmstrom Closes Alderman Campaign

George A. Holmstrom, Independent Republican candidate for alderman in the Eighteenth Ward, is winding up his campaign today. Married and the father of four children, he has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business since 1923. He is an officer of the Rose Building and Loan Association.

SERUM BY AIR SAVES WOMAN

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Mrs. Andrew Nelson, victim of Addison's disease, was reported much improved today by physicians.

Mrs. Nelson has been ill for several weeks and was believed near death when her physicians located a supply of cortin, an extract of the hormone of the cortex, one of the suprarenals of cattle and is still in the experimental stage.

Mrs. Nelson's improvement began yesterday, after three days treatment with the hormone, and today her doctors corroborated by examination her statement that she was better.

Man Held Up; Beaten On Shadyside Bridge

Three Negroes early today held up and beat Joseph Yaris of 6445 Orchard street on the Shadyside Bridge. He was treated at Pittsburgh Hospital and sent to his home.

FREE STRIP RAID DEFENDANTS

Five men arrested by Pittsburgh police during a series of raids upon alleged disorderly houses in the turbulent "Strip" district, scene of the Sullivan-O'Malley fight, were freed on a writ of habeas corpus by Judge James R. Macfarlane today.

Those freed were Freeman Trasict, barber, of 2614 Mulberry way, fined $50 or 60 days in the workhouse, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, and Eugene Proctor, Herbert Brooks, William West and William Lawrence, all of 2614 Mulberry way, charged with visiting a disorderly house. All are Negroes. They were fined $10 or 10 days in the workhouse.

The writ was obtained by Attorney Samuel G. Wagner, who declared the five had been arrested by police because they were opposed to administration candidates. After the hearing Trasict said three other men arrested in the raid with him and his five companions were discharged by police on their promise to vote for "Coyne."

Past Head of Legion Lauds Judge Foster

John B. Nicklas, past county commander of the American Legion, in indorsing Judge Foster for re-election to the County Court, said:

"I believe Judge Foster should be re-elected because he is a courageous judge with clean and concise ideas of law and justice intermixed with that rare faculty of common sense as well as having an understanding of human nature."

379-MILE GAIT SETS NEW AIR SPEED MARK

British Fliers Disappointed As Official Timer Lowers Mark in Schneider Race

CALSHOT, England, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—British aviators were surprised and somewhat disappointed today when it was announced that the figures to be submitted for official approval in connection with Lieut. G. H. Stainforth's attack on the world's speed record yesterday will be 379.05 miles an hour instead of 386.1 as unofficially given out yesterday.

The reduced figures still constitute a new world speed record, however. The error in yesterday's figures was due to the use of stopwatches by the timekeeper. To comply with the regulations the speed of a Schneider Cup plane must be established by an automatic timing device.

A film of the timing apparatus today showed that Lieut. Stainforth's actual speed was nearly seven miles less than that recorded by the stopwatches. The fastest lap was flown at 388.67 miles an hour instead of 404.265 as the stopwatch showed.

FLY COURSE SEVEN TIMES

Lieut. J. N. Boothman went through the formality of winning the cup permanently by flying seven times over a 31-mile course at an average speed of 340.08 miles an hour. He also broke the world's record over a closed circuit with a 100-kilometer start by speeding 342.9 miles an hour in the course of his flight.

Lacking official verification by the International Aeronautical Federation, it was announced Stainforth had smashed the previous speed record of 357.7 miles an hour, set by Squadron Leader A. H. Orlebar in 1929, by more than 28 miles an hour.

Thousands gathered along the Solent watched breathlessly as the gleaming, wasp-like planes sped around the course. Stainforth and Boothman were given ovations when they came down, the latter's wife shouting:

"He's done it. I am so proud and happy, but I knew my husband was as keen as mustard."

IGNORES SAFETY

Stainforth was not hampered by advance orders and flew with his throttle wide open. He had the advantage of calm weather and the words "safety first" were not in his vocabulary. A special engine is being built for him and he may make an attempt to beat his own record this week, possibly tomorrow.

Having won the trophy two years in succession, Great Britain gained permanent possession through the withdrawal of the French and Italian entries at the eleventh hour. The cup was presented by the late Jacques Schneider, French sportsman, and was won by the United States in 1923 and 1925.

DOCTOR'S BODY FOUND IN CREEK

The body of Dr. P. W. Bushong, 56, of 360 South Evaline street, recovered yesterday from French Creek, near Meadville, Pa., was expected in Pittsburgh today. According to a report to the Venango County Coroner, Dr. Bushong had suffered a nervous breakdown recently and had been motoring with Mrs. Bushong in an attempt to recover his health. He was believed by the Coroner to have ended his life Saturday.

Dr. Bushong had practiced in Pittsburgh 27 years. He was a graduate of Ohio Northwestern University and the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

normal conditions, if Collings were actually drowned Wednesday night, the body would rise to the surface sometime last night or today.

A new clue found today was a raincoat at Eaton's neck, Suffolk county. It was to be shown to Mrs. Collings this afternoon in an effort to learn if it was worn by one of her alleged abductors.

Meanwhile police were checking two new theories.

One theory was that an escaped madman, with the aid of an 18-year-old youth, had drowned Collings and then attacked his wife. The other was that someone who knew Collings had engineered his murder and the abduction of his wife.

BLANKET TRACED

The second theory came about with the discovery of two names in a hotel register in Springfield, Mass. A couple had registered at the Hotel Charles as "F. E. Collingbourne and wife" of Stamford.

That night a hotel blanket was taken out of the room when the guests checked out. Such a blanket was found in the stolen motorboat Bo Peep, in which Mrs. Collings says she was taken and attacked by the two men after they threw her husband into the sound.

Detectives determined the writing on the register was not that of Collings. Mrs. Collings said she had never heard of the name Collingbourne before.

Seek to Identify Woman Found Dead

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Police sought today to determine the identity of the body of a woman, between 30 and 35 years old, found beside the highway, near Rockaway Beach, yesterday. It was clad only in a flimsy undergarment. Constable S. A. Landini said bruises and wounds on the head made it appear that the woman had been slain.

FATAL BOMBING BRINGS ARREST

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 14.—Ennio Flacco, local Italian merchant, whose home was bombed early Sunday, was placed under arrest this morning by Sharon police. No specific charges have been made against the man, but he will be held until police complete their investigation.

Frank Nodae, 21, of Youngstown, whose body was found in the ruins of the home, was one of the bombers, police believe, who was caught by the falling timbers. His body was identified last evening by a brother, Lewis, who told authorities the last he saw of Frank was after he furnished bond Saturday night to gain his release from jail on a liquor charge, after he had been arrested near Youngstown.

The bombing was the third in Sharon within a month.

Lord Inchcape Quits Free-Trader Ranks

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—The protective tariff tanks in Great Britain have acquired a recruit in Lord Inchcape, a lifelong free-trader. He wrote in the Daily Mail today that "in present conditions I admit the expediency of a tariff to protect industry and agriculture."

Lord Inchcape is well known as a merchant and shipping magnate. He is senior partner in several large firms trading to the Far East, vice president of the Suez Canal Company, and chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company.

Two Autos Robbed In Parking Places

A. T. Canning, of 412 Penn avenue, complained to police today that two sample cases containing $300 worth of women's and children's clothing were taken from his car after he left it at a downtown garage. Rose Diodati, of 1709 Fifth avenue, lost $15 and a $30 watch she left in her car when she parked it in another garage, reports said.

Havana Car Strike Ends in Compromise

HAVANA, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Striking motormen and conductors who have tied up operation of the Havana Electric Railways for the last six weeks have compromised with the company and agreed to return to work on a flat 26 cents per hour basis.

wife, Josephine, for attempting to register on allegedly fake tax receipts at the Forbes school Saturday night, before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg. They were held for further investigation. The couple who gave their address as 1703 Fifth avenue, had lived in the First Ward only three weeks, Kaiser told police, they declared, that Schneider had solicited his support.

The storming of the constable's home occurred four hours after Supt. Walsh was alleged to have ignored a writ of habeas corpus issued for the release of James Kelly, a Schneider adherent.

FIGHT PRECEDS RAID

A fight Saturday night in the City Detective Bureau between Schneider and Patrolman William Deasy, in which Schneider suffered a cut over the left eye which required three stitches at Passavant Hospital, precipitated the raid on his home, Schneider said. He said he called at the Detective Bureau in an attempt to procure the release of Kelly who, with Louis Fisher, of 5 Pride street, was arrested Saturday morning.

Police charged Fisher with attempting to register in the First Ward when he is a resident of the Third Ward. Police quoted him as saying that Kelly had given him the tax receipt.

GUEST WOUNDED

One of several bullets alleged to have been fired by police grazed the face of George Morgan, 18, of 1008 Locust street, a guest in the Schneider home. Richard Stack, 33, of 1125 Locust street, who also was visiting at the Schneider home, ran to protect Mrs. Schneider and her daughter, Margaret, 5. He was slugged on the head with a revolver butt by a policeman, according to Schneider. While two of the police ordered them to throw up their hands, the other two, Schneider said, searched the house and, finding nothing, arrested Schneider, Morgan, Stack and Jerome King, 26, of 1926 Forbes street.

At a hearing in the Center Avenue Police Court yesterday police testified they were riding in Van Braam street, when one of a crowd of men fired a shot at their car. They stopped in time to see the man run into Schneider's home, they testified. No mention was made of the battle in Schneider's home.

OFFICERS DENY CHARGE

The patrolmen, John Nary, Joseph Flick, Albert Best and George Miller, denied firing any shots in the house. Police said they fired while pursuing the gunmen in the street.

Supt. Walsh today said his investigation corroborated the testimony of the police. He said the bullet marks in the walls of Schneider's home were those left there six years ago when gangsters attempted to put the late Police Lieut. Tony Forester "on the spot." Schneider now lives in Forester's former home. Schneider declared:

"The police who invaded my home are a part of a detail ordered to whip the First Ward in line for Paul Walsh. They not only intimidate my supporters, but arrest them on framed-up charges."

Sleuth to Face Polls Clash Charge

City Detective William Smith, Negro, was listed for a hearing Thursday before Alderman John J. Verona on a charge of felonious shooting and assault and battery, according to county detectives.

Smith was arrested by Detectives Michael Stabile and Michael Pord after he was alleged to have fired a shot into a crowd of several hundred voters attempting to register at the Franklin School Saturday night.

Fence at Bluebeard Farm Wrecked Third Time

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 14.—County police officers today had on their hands today request for investigation into the second and third mob fence destruction at the scene of the Powers murder farm at Quiet Dell near here.

Early Sunday morning a mob of more than 300 men gathered at the farm and after overpowering six armed guards on the scene proceeded to destroy the high sheet iron fence erected there by the lessee. After the sheet-iron panels were ripped off the posts were pulled up and a huge bon fire was made of them. Several hours afterward the lessees sent barbed wire fence materials to the scene with a corps of men who it erected another fence. Thereupon another mob formed, went to the farm and destroyed the third fence.

There has been wide expression of indignation hereabout ever since Cecil B. Kester, Dr. F. K. McClure and others leased the Powers murder farm from Mrs. Harry F. Powers, wife of the self-confessed multiple murderer, and converted it into an amusement park, charging admission.

The first mob action occurred the night of September 6 when a crowd of men went to the farm and destroyed a high board fence that promoters had built around it.

THE "PURITAN" AT RODGERS FIELD . . . . ON VISIT TO BOOST PENNSYLVANIA AUTOMOTIVE ASSOCIATION'S CONVENTION

21 Nuns Disfranchised; 13 Absent Ones on List

Pittsburgh's ballot thieves and election stealers have apparently carried their acts of fraud even into the sanctuary of the church, it became known today when the Rev. E. Lawrence O'Connell, assistant pastor of Sacred Heart Church, disclosed that 21 of the nuns there have been disfranchised and 13 others, no longer living at the church, entered on the voting lists.

Father O'Connell said:

"About the middle of August an assessor came to the convent to assess the sisters for 1932—certainly of no use in the coming election. On the books in the Bureau for Assessment and Revision of Taxes we found that 13 sisters were enrolled who have been away from the convent for some time—one since 1928. Five on the books are still at the convent, but the remaining 21 now at the convent are not assessed and accordingly are deprived of their vote."

The 13 nuns, no longer at the convent, but whose names still appear on the assessment books, Father O'Connell said, are:

Ellen Short, whose religious name is Sister Helen Claire; Theodore Donahue (Sister Mary Theodore), Mary M. Fitzmaurice (Sister Mary Regina), Mary Bertha Shea (Sister Mary Bertha), Ella Doran (Sister Regina, who left in 1928), Catherine Hillgrove, Anna McGuire, Stella Beckel, Clara Cunningham, Mary Coleman (Sister Mary Paul), Raphie Dimond, Ella Karlheim (Sister Bernardo) and Alberta Sweeney.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN TO BE AIMEE'S HONEYMOON

TEMPLE FLOCK AMAZED AT ELOPEMENT

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14.—An evangelistic campaign starting at Portland, Ore., next Friday, will be the way Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton and her newly acquired husband, David L. Hutton, Pasadena composer and baritone, are to spend their honeymoon.

The dynamic woman preacher calmly resumed her evangelistic duties today following her swift, spectacular aerial "elopement."

Aimee said:

Meanwhile her thousands of followers evidenced amazement at their 38-year-old leader's sudden and secret airplane dash early yesterday to the desert town of Yuma, Ariz., where she was married to the 30-year-old singer.

WED IN AIRPLANE

The ceremony, rigidly simple, was performed in the passageway of a tri-motored airplane at the Yuma airport. Immediately after the brief wedding Aimee exclaimed:

"This is our honeymoon express—let's go."

Upon her return to Los Angeles the noted evangelist explained that the "elopement" was deemed necessary after it was discovered that a "leak" had developed in her secret plans for her marriage to Hutton.

The marriage was the evangelist's third matrimonial venture. Her first husband, Robert Semple, died 18 years ago. She was divorced from her second husband, Harold McPherson, in 1921.

Miss Harriet Jordan, director of Angelus Temple, officiated at the airport wedding which was solemnized shortly before dawn.

F. C. Winters, the temple manager, acted as best man. Mrs. Winters was matron of honor and Miss Emma Schaffer, the evangelist's secretary, was the only bridesmaid. The bride was given away by her son, Rolf McPherson, himself a newlywed.

BRIDEGROOM IS SINGER

Miss Jordan used the double ring ceremony, sanctifying the marriage with a platinum ring, surmounted with 10 diamonds, for the bride, and a platinum ring of orange blossom design for the groom.

Mrs. McPherson Hutton's bridal costume consisted of a saxon blue three-piece suit, trimmed in blue fox fur. She wore an Empress Eugenie hat of blue and shoes and bag to match.

Hutton, whose home is in Pasadena, Cal., is the leading man in Aimee's sacred opera, "The Iron Furnace," in which he sings the role of an Egyptian Pharoah.

A few hours after her return to Los Angeles the famed woman pastor, speaking of her romance with the youngish singer, said:

"We had known each other some months, but the romance began in earnest only last June. We talked and talked about our plans and after much prayer felt that our lives and our work should be joined. I have worked hard for years and have been lonesome. I love him dearly and I know that we will be happy."

Informed of her daughter's marriage Mrs. Minnie (Ma) Kennedy, now conducting an evangelistic campaign at Las Vegas, Nev., was quoted as saying she was "overjoyed." Mrs. Kennedy and her daughter are estranged. Mrs. Kennedy recently had her marriage to Guy Edward (What a Man) Hudson annulled after a brief honeymoon when it was charged he already was married to another woman.

She said:

"I am very happy for Aimee. I wish my daughter and her husband the very best things in the world. I'd like to hug them both. Like myself, Aimee deserves to have a comrade to cheer her and aid her through life, someone to make her happy. I am so very glad this has come to pass.

"Next to my marriage nothing could make me happier."

Roberta McPherson, 20-year-old daughter of the evangelist, several months ago was married to William Bradley Smyth, 23, then purser on an around-the-world liner. Rolf's marriage to Miss Smith took place recently.

Butler Holds War 'Dumb Diplomacy'

WELLESLEY, Mass., Sept. 14.—(INS.)—With the declaration that "War is dumb diplomacy," Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, of the United States Marines, went on record today with the prophecy that the next international armed conflict will be in the generation after next.

Before more than 1,000 persons at the eighteenth annual business men's conference at Babson Park, Butler said that if diplomacy was handled and spoken in every day language, with no ulterior motives, there would be no next war.

230 RESCUED FROM LINER

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Abandoned by her passengers and crew and battered by heavy seas, the Panama Mail liner Colombia today lay on the rocky reef of Santa Marguerita Island, 670 miles south of here off the Lower California coast.

All of 130 passengers and crew of 100 were aboard the United Fruit Company's liner La Perla, due to arrive at Los Angeles harbor Wednesday.

Lifeboats were picked up by the San Mateo, another United Fruit liner.

Late last night, the passengers and crew were trans-shipped to La Perla, which was proceeding northward when it intercepted the SOS call. The San Mateo was proceeding southward. The Colombia was bound from New York to California.

Last June the Colombia went aground off Staten Island, New York, without loss of life. She ran aground in 1924 off Costa Rica and was salvaged without loss of life.

Messages from Capt. Theodore K. Oaks of the Colombia, indicated the vessel was doomed.

AUSTRIA SEIZES FASCIST CHIEF

VIENNA, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Prince Ernest Rudiger Starhemberg, Fascist leader, was arrested today and police were seeking others who attempted to seize control of the Styrian provincial government in a brief "putsch" yesterday.

The Austrian government having apparently suppressed the Fascist uprising in Northern and Eastern towns took punitive measures. It suspended more than 200 civil servants, accused of actively or passively promoting the revolutionary plan and ordered them to trial.

Two generals associated with the Heimwehr, Fascist force, also were arrested today. They were seized at Linz. Warrants for the arrest of five other Fascist leaders, including Dr. Walter Pfriemer, self-proclaimed dictator in the Styria section, were issued. Col. Rauter, head of the Styrian Heimwehr, and Count Lamberg, his aide, also are named in the warrants.

Prince Starhemberg, who was an adherent of Germany's Adolf Hitler in the notorious "Kapp putsch" in 1920, is a national Socialist and reputed to be one of the wealthiest landowners in Austria.

SENATOR LAUDS HEARST SPEECH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(Universal.)—Commenting on the radio speech of William Randolph Hearst over the radio Saturday night, Senator Smith W. Brookhart (Rep.), of Iowa, outstanding Senate Progressive, said:

"Mr. Hearst's plan for a $5,000,000,000 public works program impresses me favorably because it would serve as a permanent remedy for our present economic ills.

"Nobody believes in the dole as a permanent thing, but when men are starving something must be done. The dole is only a temporary expedient at best.

The advantage in Mr. Hearst's plan is that it points the way to permanent recovery. It provides employment for these men out of work, and that is what they want.

"Personally, I would modify Mr. Hearst's suggestion so that $2,000,000,000 of the proposed amount would be used for the relief of agriculture. The remaining $3,000,000,000 would be available for construction projects. To my mind such a program would be sufficient to start the wheels of industry and restore prosperity."

Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said he was impressed by Mr. Hearst's description of the ill effects brought on by the dole in England. He added:

"Mr. Hearst's views on the dole are unquestionably right. The position he takes is like that taken by most careful observers of the thing."

GANDHI IS MUTE AS PARLEY ON INDIA OPENS

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The round table conference on India, assembled to formulate a new federal constitution for Britain's teeming peninsular possession, reopened in the golden throne room of St. James Palace here today.

Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, leader of the Indian Nationalists, was one of the last arrivals. He appeared on the scene 10 minutes after the meeting had gotten under way.

Attired in his traditional costume of loin cloth and shawl, Gandhi drove to the ancient palace from his modest temporary headquarters in Kingsley Hall, Bow, in an automobile. Accompanying him was his lifelong friend, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, Indian poetess.

Gandhi escaped injury as the car collided with a stone pillar in the courtyard.

SEEM STRANGE CONTRAST

Lord Sankey, lord chancellor of Britain, opened the meeting with a brief speech of welcome, after which the delegates took their places at a huge oval table.

Gandhi presented a strange spectacle in his peasant costume. The British statesmen wore formal morning attire, as did most of the Indian delegates, with the exception of a number of the princes who appeared in native costumes, but without glamorous jewels or decorations.

HIS SILENT DAY

Members of the conference, anxious to hear at first hand Gandhi's proposals to benefit India, were doomed to disappointment. The re-opening of the historic conference fell upon the Mahatma's traditional "day of silence" and he announced that during the meeting he would merely sit and listen, scribbling on paper the answers to any questions.

Occasionally he sipped goat's milk from a vacuum bottle.

Interviewed in his monastic "cell" at Kingsley Hall, the London settlement house, where he has taken up permanent residence while in London, Gandhi made it clear he would observe his "day of silence" regardless of pressure brought to bear on him.

at the Coroner's inquest into her employer's death.

At that time she named members of the alleged union as Benny Goldberg, Louis Epstein, Capitbi S. Caseda, Joseph Certo, Abe Kershbaum and J. Dispoff. Several of these individuals were revealed today as having purchased large supplies of yeast from Siragusa. Several of these men were questioned by Detective Sergt. Samuel Wheeler today and others will be called from day to day for questioning, Wheeler said.

TORTURE INDICATED

Siragusa, his body riddled with bullets and bearing evidence of torture was found on a stairway leading from the basement of his fashionable Beechwood boulevard home. A shaving brush in his lifeless hand and a cup of lather in the basement kitchen told how he had been surprised by his assailants, who beat him with clubs and then shot him.

He died on the stairway with one arm clutching the banister, to which were tacked a number of sacred pictures and a rosary. A parrot caged in the basement room was the only witness and all the garrulous bird had to say was:

"Polly—pretty Polly."

CHILD DISCOVERS BODY

Siragusa's young daughter, Katherine, was the first to discover the crime. Arising from her slumbers, the child clambered down the basement stairs over the prostrate form of her father and, frightened, ran to the home of a neighbor—Tony Esposito, 595 English lane.

RETURN OF BEER URGED TO AID JOBLESS

Breweries Would Employ 1,000,000, Legion Parley Told; Dole Condemned

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The prohibition issue was tossed unexpectedly into the lap of the American Legion unemployment conference today, when a spokesman for the American Federation of Labor declared the legalization of beer would do more to relieve unemployment this winter than all other relief measures combined.

M. J. McDonough, president of the building trades department of the Federation, made the suggestion after representatives of capital and industry indorsed unemployment insurance, condemned the dole and suggested that each locality "look after its own" unemployed next winter.

'JOBS FOR 1,000,000'

McDonough declared that all measures suggested thus far would put few men to work, but that the legalization of beer would furnish jobs to from 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 men and women within five months.

McDonough pointed out that the legalization of beer would put thousands of breweries into operation at once. He said:

"Relief of unemployment is the most important issue before the country today. Here is the brewing industry which is legally not in operation now, but if it were revived, in four or five months would put from 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 ment to work. What other measures presented at this conference will relieve unemployment so quickly and so thoroughly?

"I am not talking for the breweries, but if the incoming Congress would have the courage to vote as it drinks, they would legalize the brewing of beer. It would place this huge army of men at work in a few months. Just think what it would mean to other industries if you add the spendings of a million workers in the brewing industry."

DOLE CONDEMNED

Indorsing unemployment insurance but condemning the dole, Silas H. Strawn, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told the conference it was the duty of every individual, organization and industry to collaborate with President Hoover's employment commission in relieving suffering this winter. He said it was the primary duty of each locality "to look after its own." He predicted that relief needs for the city would be greater this winter than last.

Strawn said there was no telling when bad times would end, but warned against hysteria. He said:

"We must keep our feet on the ground. We should be careful to warn the country not to become hysterical. We ought to warn the people so that we will not become like Germany and Great Britian. They have become hysterical."

RUBINOFF BACK HOME FOR VISIT

Dave Rubinoff, known years ago for his specialty violin numbers at Homer Lane's American cafe here, where he performed for $18 a week, came back to Pittsburgh today for his first professional appearance in five years.

Rubinoff, who was also a music supervisor at Forbes school here, and before that a newsboy, returned for an engagement at the Stanley Theater, beginning Friday, which will net him $3,000 for the week.

He came to town from New York, where, last night, he and Eddie Cantor took part in a radio broadcast that was sent throughout the country. Rubinoff went directly to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Rubinoff, 5600 Forbes street.

Prompted by his parents, Rubinoff recounted experiences of his life here. He said:

"I don't know of any other city that has more attraction to me than Pittsburgh has. It doesn't seem so long ago since I decided the Fourth Avenue Railroad Station was a good spot for a newsboy.

"In less than no time I remember selling all but two of my papers. Then somebody grabbed me by the seat of my pants and rushed me up to Forbes street. It seems that somebody else had a newsstand there."

Rubinoff eluded friends who gathered at the Pennsylvania Station to welcome him and went directly to his parents' home. While his breakfast was being prepared, he played several violin selections for his mother.

President Returns From Virginia Camp

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—President Hoover returned to the White House shortly after 9 o'clock today, greatly refreshed by two nights and a day spent in the Virginia mountains.

BARR PREDICTS GANG DEFEAT

"In spite of the efforts of the Armstrong and Kline machines to perpetrate a wholesale steal in tomorrow's election, the independent Republican candidates have so impressed honest citizens that the downfall of the machines is certain.

"If the people will get out the full vote in their districts the reign of the grafters, cheaters and racketeers will be at an end."

Russia Quadruples Her Movie Houses

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AP).—Russia now has 24,000 movie theaters, the number quadrupled in less than four years. Forty soviet films have been sent to the United States this year.

Officials Saturday night, appeared in the Registration Commission office this morning demanding to be put on the books.

Attorney Mehalid told them the law made it impossible for their requests to be granted.

TROOPERS ROUT CROWDS

Scenes broke out at a score of registration places Saturday night when the closing hour of 11 o'clock found long lines of prospective voters still awaiting registration.

State troopers, 50 of whom had been patrolling the districts similar to those of disorders of the last registration days, were sent to various districts dispersing the crowds.

The law provides that 10 electors are permitted in the booth at one time, and that those in the proximity are entitled to be registered.

The registration, which passed the 200,000 mark, according to estimates had been cut down due to the stamping of the tickets to prevent repeating.

Angry crowds stood about the polling place in the Sixth District of the Seventeenth Ward in South Side School, after being refused admittance. The board let in as many as could be crowded in and locked the door.

BEECHVIEW CROWD

At Brighton Heights in the Twenty-first Ward, at the Northern Home for the Aged, a long line was still waiting when the place was closed. The crowd milling around started to agitate and state police were called to disperse them.

The registration books from 15 districts were taken to the Pittsburgh Technical School Registration station for the convenience of those who could not get to their polling places more easily at other places.

At the Ward Manor precinct, Thirty-second Ward, the polls were closed at 9 p.m. when the doors were locked and the keys were given to the registration clerks. Of the 800 voters registered there, 600 had voted.

Negroes Condemn Burlesquing of Race

ATLANTA, Sept. 14 (AP).—Officials of the National Baptist convention, a Negro organization, passed a resolution protesting the burlesquing of the Negro over the radio, particularly by the team known as Amos 'n' Andy. The resolution favored restraining Amos 'n' Andy from broadcasting.

Another resolution advocated a boycott by Negroes of businesses throughout the country which do not employ Negroes in any capacity.

Soviet Air Official, Assistant Killed

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AP).—Moscow newspapers published an announcement of the death of P. H. Mezheraup, inspector of military air forces in Russia, and his assistant, V. O. Pisarenko.

No details were given beyond saying that the aviators perished while fulfilling their duty. Mezheraup was 36 and was several times decorated for bravery by the Soviet government for his activities against bandits in Turkestan.

KLINE BLOCKS MELLON ON HARMONY

liam D. Mansfield, a third Commissioner candidate.

County road superintendents working under Armstrong, are reported to have begun distribution of Mansfield literature to their subordinates Saturday, carrying out the understanding which has been beneath the surface throughout the campaign. Whether it was this action which caused the Mayor and Coyne to ignore Armstrong yesterday is speculative.

ARMSTRONG LEFT WAITING

The Twenty-first Ward meeting yesterday was addressed by Kline, Coyne, Councilman Harry Little, Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh and others. Armstrong was to have been invited to the meeting, making his appearance during its progress. He was waiting to get the word which would time his entrance. He is still waiting, for the word never came, and the meeting went through as only for Coyne and the Mayor's councilmanic slate.

Walsh, close friend of Armstrong, to whom he owed his original appointment in the Kline cabinet, has been speaking for Armstrong practically every time he has addressed ward workers. He told First Warders some time ago they could take Armstrong as their second candidate after voting for Coyne. But yesterday the chief, evidently under orders from the Mayor, made no mention of Armstrong's name.

This the Armstrong people today interpreted as concrete evidence that Coyne intended to get votes for himself alone wherever that could be done with safety.

The Mayor made a fervid speech for Coyne, and was insistent that the Twenty-first Ward go down the line for the whole Council slate. As stories have been afloat that Traffic Magistrate William J. Soost and Councilman Robert Alderdice, two of the Mayor's Council entries, were ignoring Representative James P. Rooney, another slated Council candidate, some North Side workers Rooney's neighbors, have intimated they would "plump" for Rooney.

ATTACKS FREDERICK

In an aside the Mayor attacked Dr. F. H. Frederick, "chairman of North Side chairmen," who is for Armstrong and Mansfield, then asked all present to "Vote for my good friend Bill McLaughlin," who is a candidate for constable. This also has riled the Armstrong people, who insist that if there was any intent on the part of the Mayor and Coyne to help their man he could speak for Armstrong, if the Mayor was so inclusive in his oratory as to mention a constable candidate.

The incident has stirred circles where practical politicians work. It is not discounted that Mellon has been working hard for Coyne, pinching off an Armstrong follower here and there, but gaining new converts and making old ones stick is now a complicated task.

Meanwhile the Mansfield backers appear confident that Armstrong will keep pledges he made last week to support the McKeesport Senator. They are said to have an understanding based on practical considerations.

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, the only Commissioner candidate not involved in the muddle over alliances, because he is making a lone fight, figures to profit from the confusion. He will get many "plumper" votes of electors who had intended to vote for Mansfield. The McGovern management has issued no such instructions, hoping that the course of Mansfield would make it possible for them to support him, but the continued silence of the Senator has not helped their plans.

GOLLMAR URGES COYNE SUPPORT

The work of Senator James J. Coyne in electing Gov. Pinchot, and his "record as an independent," were cited yesterday by former Judge Frank I. Gollmar as reasons for support of Coyne's candidacy for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner.

Gollmar, who was chairman of the Allegheny County Pinchot campaign committee last year, said:

"There is none to deny that his aid was needed and helped to bring us victory. Certainly the independent voters of Allegheny County who believe in Gov. Pinchot and who were anxious for his election, owe a debt to Coyne for his support in that campaign."

Gollmar has already announced his support of Commissioner McGovern.

Jeha Denounces News Suppression

"The practice of the Prothonotary's office in withholding information on cases involving prominent people was criticized yesterday by Henry S. Jeha, an independent candidate for Republican nomination for Prothonotary. He said it was "not in accord with the principles of free government."

NEWSDEALERS CHEER 16-PAGE COMIC PAPER

Banquest Guests Hear of Big Laugh-Filled Section Starting Next Sunday

Doubling the size of a color comic section such as readers of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph have been getting involved weeks of constructive planning and research. Newspaper comics demanded today must have a popular human appeal and it has been no small contract to assemble 16 new and outstanding favorites that will compare more than favorably with the 16 unusually popular comics that readers of this newspaper have been regularly following.

The new comics are coming next Sunday in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. 16 pages, 32 comics, all in four colors, all of the old favorites, a wealth of new ones, all combined in a magazine section, full standard page size and offering 100 per cent more thrills and 100 per cent more laughs.

No, all of this could not be accomplished in a day. The Sunday Sun-Telegraph has had it in preparation for many weeks for a first appearance next Sunday as originally announced in the early editions of yesterday's Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

SURPASSES PREVIOUS EFFORTS

The new magazine will be known as THE COMIC WEEKLY PUCK, and will be so complete in content and color that it will outclass anything of the kind that has ever before been attempted by any newspaper in the world. In fact, no other newspaper in this reading area has the facilities for printing 16 pages in one section—all in four colors. And no other newspaper has the resources to draw upon for additional comics that would command reader interest.

Yes, the big new COMIC WEEKLY PUCK will make its debut with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph next Sunday and it will be a whale of a section — just double the size of the section that readers of this newspaper have been getting.

DEALERS HEAR PLANS

Inaugurating the promotion campaign that was mapped out weeks ago to be put behind the new comic weekly there was a meeting of more than 200 leading wholesale and retail newspaper dealers in the Urban Room of the William Penn Hotel last night, preceded by a banquet at which R. W. Bloom, circulation director of the Sun-Telegraph, presided.

Mr. Bloom described the campaign and its possibilities in detail. The first issue of next Sunday's new comic weekly was disclosed for the first time and everyone present was given a copy of it. Never before has there been a "pep" meeting that compared with this one for enthusiasm. It was the general opinion that the new comic section will sell like wildfire.

Quin Hall, Sun-Telegraph cartoonist, made a brief speech, and Harry Alder, Johnstown's leading wholesale newsdealer, made a talk that was full of helpful suggestions from the dealers' standpoint.

'OLD TIMERS' ATTEND

There were many "old timers" at the meeting, including Charles F. Eisler, of Etna, who has been selling newspapers in this territory for 47 years; Al Rodenus, Braddock, 42 years; Frank Toohill, Pitcairn, 40 years; John V. Coffey, North Side News Company, 42 years, and Mr. Alder, who was among the speakers, 35 years. Harry Barker, home delivery manager of the Sun-Telegraph, was at the speakers' table, and it was his address that brought out the facts about the "old timers."

After the banquet the entire party went to the Davis Theater, where, by courtesy of Warner Brothers Theaters, they saw Jack Holt in "Fifty Fathoms Deep," one of the most thrilling talking pictures ever shown on the silver screen. There were also comedies and news reels, interspersed with special talking pictures of the Sun-Telegraph comic artists at work: George McManus, Lynn Young, Pat Sullivan, Knerr, Rube Goldberg, Russ Westover, Segar, Cliff Sterrett, Milt Gross and others. These trailers will be seen in the leading theaters throughout the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's reading area during the next few weeks.

The investigators were members of the state Sanitary Water Board, the Fish Commission and the state Board of Health. Hopes of stopping pollution of the stream are now held.

SUBSCRIPTION. You write [illegible] Sally. [illegible] "thanks" [illegible] It [illegible] and with [illegible] and [illegible] expressions [illegible] would only have roused his indignation.

No man likes to feel that he is tied to a girl's apron strings.

But by pretending not to notice that he hadn't been around you probably made him sit up and take notice.

When he thought that it didn't make any particular difference to you whether he came or stayed away he resolved not to let any of your other friends have a chance.

It's a good idea not to let a man know that he is the most important thing in the world to you, even if he is. It's not good for his vanity.

I am quite sure that this young man must care for you or he wouldn't be spending so much of his time with you. A man usually does the thing that he likes to do. And if he comes to see you steadily he does it because he wants to.

I don't think you have anything to worry about. Alice. Let the young man do the worrying, if any, and you'll both live happily ever after.

PATTY

You said a mouthful, youngster.

And while I wouldn't advocate slapping everyone who tries to do the rushing act I'm for sticking up for yourself always. It pays.

The gangster is usually a young man.

In any honest walk of life he could expect to live for many more years, enjoying good health, peace of mind and content with his dear ones whom he loves and who love him.

How warped his sense of values has become when he willingly risks everything to gain—nothing!

For even what he calls success is nothing but a life of fear dependent upon bodyguards.

When a gangster is killed those he loved and leaves behind are abandoned in their sorrow, for his lawless life brings them little or no sympathy.

The day is here when gangsters can't help realizing that the smart ones will quit to live and enjoy life as they should.

Madge Wonders If Phil Has Returned to "Old Tricks"

I knew better than to reprove Mary by word or look for the outrageous language she was using in her temper fit. In the first place she was in her own room. I have always believed that there should be one bit of individual space for each person in the world where with door locked he or she can polish the furniture or kick it, and indulge in laughter or tears, prayer or profanity as one's whim dictates. In the second place I am so bewildered by the words and phrases of the vocabulary owned and used by modern youth that I do not consider myself qualified to sit in judgment upon their speech. I can only hear 'em and weep.

So I sat quietly in the corner where I had tucked myself and let the vials of her wrath uncork themselves one by one and flow out until the last one was empty and suddenly silent like a run-down motor. She looked at me curiously as she faced me in one of her turns of pacing the floor. She stopped short still and stared at me. Then broke into laughter as tempestuous as her anger had been.

Honestly Auntie Madge she said when she could speak. I'd forgotten that you were here. That shows what a mad I had on.

You did appear a trifle excited I admit. I told her smilingly. Was a mere aunt inquire what the trouble seems to be? I gathered from some of your murmurings that some feminine person possessed of unusual formations in legs and knees and somewhat emaciated was in danger of having her facial formation altered? Am I right?

She giggled half hysterically. Say! do you know this is hot stuff? It's a lot better than—what was it I was calling that dame?

A lousy-legged knock-kneed skinny imitation vamp. I believe. I answered demurely. At least I think those were the words you applied to her. I gather that you don't entirely approve of her. Do you know her well?

Know her? Mary repeated disdainfully. Know her? I'll tell the listening world I know her as well as if I'd jointed her and put her together. I could have made a better job with a wooden doll at that than that old beldame Nature turned out when she put her across.

Do you want to tell me about it? I asked. I'm not asking your confidence; and I don't want you to tell me a word unless you wish but sometimes it helps.

With a swift swooping motion she caught me to her and her warm young arms nearly squeezed the breath out of me.

You are the most understanding woman in the world she declared extravagantly, and of course I want to tell you everything. I was going to come and ask your advice pretty soon anyhow, for I can't make up the thing I—park—under my hat—when—I—wear one as to what this is all about, anyway. Is Noel just naturally getting nutty or is his father loving some more of the Princess Olina stuff?

As the old writers would say, I "pricked up my ears." I knew that Noel reluctantly because of Mary, had accepted his father's invitation to be his guest upon a long motor trip through the beauty spots of the West. It was, as anything connected with Philip Veritzen always is, a trip de luxe with Otto in close attendance and with frequent stops at places where the best accommodations were available. I had seen in it only the natural desire of a father—long at odds with his son and remorseful for the treatment he had meted out to him—to make up to his boy in some measure for the long estrangement. But these disquieting questions of Mary's were they simply figments of her jealous imagination or did they mean that Philip Veritzen was trying to renege upon the promise he had made me at the last Christmas season: the promise to become reconciled to his son, to give him his mother's fortune, so long withheld, to restore Mary to her former status as a future Veritzen star, with the corollary of training by the great producer himself, and to cease his objections to the marriage of his son and Dicky's lovely young niece?

"The greatest theatrical genius of the century," as more than one critic had acclaimed him, had kept the first three promises meticulously. He had made over to Noel the patrimony which for years he had held as a club over the boy's head, giving it to him when Noel had pleased him, withholding it when the son could not fulfil the almost impossible commands of his father. But now and I gave myself a figurative pat on the back for my insistence, the money left by his mother in trust for the boy at the discretion of his father until his thirty-fifth year was so tightly Noel's that no one in the world could take it away from him unless by his own consent.

Mary also was so firmly reinstated in her position that I knew even the great producer could not drop her from it without stultifying himself publicly. And to all appearances the reconciliation between himself and his son was as complete as his apparent approval of the marriage after two or three years, of Mary and Noel.

Mary was looking at me curiously. "Don't you want to commit yourself on that question?" she asked.

Household Hints -:-

One or two drops of glycerine or one-half teaspoonful of cornstarch added to the cream will make it whip quicker and will not affect the taste.

When planning a dinner strictly of vegetables be sure to think of the color combination they will make when on the table. If they make a pretty picture they are sure to be appetizing.

Sprinkle a little fine granulated sugar over the top of the sponge cake before putting it in the oven to bake. This will produce a rich brown color that will greatly improve the appearance.

The Beauty Box -:-

By HELEN FOLLETT

Dry hair needs brushing, plenty of it, to bring forth a greater flow of lubricating oil from the scalp glands to be distributed the length of the hair shafts. The night before the shampoo friction olive or mineral oil into the scalp. Immediately after the shampoo apply petrolatum to the roots of the glorious crown. Select a bland soap for the shampoo.

If middle-aged women are to keep in touch with their youth, retain the erect figure, trot along in the modern pageant, they must have recreations, some form of outdoor life. A lot of life's beautiful illusions have blown up. Ambition doesn't seem important. Something has to be done to keep the old heels nimble and the eyes a-shining. At the age of 30 every woman should have learned that being serious all the time is one way of being foolish. All work and no play makes her motose. A brisk walk, a game of golf or romping with the children puts her in form.

No affectation is the desire to sport a slim waist line. It is what every woman should have, and will have if she shows discrimination in the matter of diet. If she will overcome her hatred of exercise, keep muscles tight and strong. Won't do to let rolls of fat get a start. They're likely to come as the years prance by and there's less activity. Soon as a gal marches with slow-moving traffic the adipose bogies catch her—unless she has had the good luck to inherit leanness from both parents.

How to Keep Well

Fall Is Time to Guard Throat Against Quinsy

I am often asked: What is a quinsy sore throat?

Quinsy sore throat occurs most frequently in the early Spring and late Fall. It is a common [illegible] often [illegible] disease. The [illegible] condition is [illegible] excruciating pain. It usually causes great discomfort and anxiety to one suffering from it.

Dr. Copeland

Quinsy sore throat is really an abscess of the tonsil. The abscess occurs as a result of an infection of the tonsil. As a rule it affects one side only. The pain is on the side involved.

The disease frequently follows a severe attack of tonsillitis, inflammation of the tonsils. The acute symptoms subside and leave behind a one-sided pain due to the resulting abscess of the tonsil. Not every case of tonsillitis is followed by a quinsy sore throat, however.

Some persons appear to be much more susceptible to this complication than others. This is difficult to explain, as it is to explain why one person may get boils and another does not.

Unfortunately, if a person has one attack of quinsy sore throat he will probably have another. There may be five or six attacks and even more unless the tonsils are removed.

In a severe attack the victim is unable to swallow solid food and even complains of pain when swallowing liquids. As a result of this the patient suffers from lack of food and soon finds himself in a weak condition. There are loss of weight and strength and, with the high fever, the patient is really sick.

He may hold his hand to his ear when he swallows. Indeed ear-ache with quinsy is very common. This sort of pain is spoken of as referred pain. The ear and throat possess a complicated network of nerves and it is not surprising that the pain shoots everywhere.

It may even be in the knees and ankles. This is due to the poisons which are absorbed from the abscess in the throat. Such patients require careful attention to prevent damage to the heart. In rare cases the abscess in the throat may affect the kidneys and even produce Bright's disease.

If the abscess does not respond to simple treatment it is imperative that it be opened as soon as possible. It is wrong to wait until it breaks. That was the old attitude. It may even be necessary to open such abscesses but to do so prevents much unnecessary suffering and further trouble.

Answers to Health Queries

F. T. E. Q. Is there any way in which I can increase my height? My small stature is a handicap to me. I am 18 years of age and and inch or so over 5 feet tall.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Chaperon

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A young man of my acquaintance invited my brother and me to spend the week-end at his camp, his mother making up the fourth member of the group. At the last minute it was impossible for his mother to go, and he telephoned to ask me whether I still cared to go. Although I realized he had made extensive plans, and although I have known him for some time I refused the invitation on the advice of my mother. Was this the polite and correct thing to do, or would the presence of my brother have made it conventional to go?

2. And still another question: is it correct for a small club of mixed young people, 12 to be exact, to go on a one-night camping trip without a chaperon? Many of them consider a chaperon old-fashioned since we do not pair off and consider ourselves more like a family group? Thank you for your assistance. R. W.

1. Your mother and you showed excellent and sure social judgment when you decided that it would be best for you not to go on this visit since the hostess was not to be present. It was indeed the polite and correct thing to do and the boy's mother, I am sure, would not have wished you to do otherwise.

2. It would be better taste and better form to have an older person accompany this group.

Engagement Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been going with a young man for quite a while and I am supposed to receive an engagement ring this month. Would it be necessary to have an engagement party? I would like to know what is the proper thing to do, because I would much rather not have a party. A. H.

There is never any reason to give an engagement party unless you wish to. Before the engagement is announced publicly, write notes to your friends telling them the good news. Your fiance also will write to his friends. Both, of course, would before this have told your close relatives. Then, a day or two after the notes are received, it is correct, if you wish, to have your parents make official announcement of the engagement in the newspapers.

How Do You Do

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When being introduced to a person is it proper to say:

1. I'm certainly glad to know you.
2. Glad to know you.
3. It is a pleasure.
4. How do you do? L. B.

The fourth suggestion is the only correct one. . . . "How do you do" is what we should say always when we acknowledge an introduction. The others, 1, 2 and 3, are in poor form, wretched form, and should never be used.

GRIMES RAPS 'OLIGARCHY'

Charging that in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County "unclean money sits in the seats of the mighty," William D. Grimes, an independent candidate for Common Pleas Court, today addressed a crowd at independent headquarters.

Grimes lauding the independent movement and the independent-minded people of the county, declared:

"Since the day of Theodore Roosevelt, no campaign ever conducted here has given expression to such independence of thought, spirit and attitude as this.

"Especially is thus true of the open and critical attitude expressed against the judicial oligarchy which for generations has been in control of the judicial branch of the government. This attitude locally towards the judiciary arises because of the suspicion that an unfair and powerful combination has been entered into between seven judicial officers, with the intent through such a political combination to defeat the will of the people."

Mr. Grimes lauded the records of Gov. Pinchot and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern.

FREE 2 DRIVERS AFTER CRASH

A collision that involved four automobiles in Ohio River boulevard near McKees Rocks Bridge, last Monday, was aired in Traffic Court today and two of the participants who had been charged with reckless driving were discharged.

J. D. Shirk, 315 Second street, Ellwood City, said M. J. Concannon, 133 Grant street, Bellevue, was straddling the dividing line. Both had been charged with reckless driving and were discharged.

There was a collision and Shirk's car, it was said, struck a truck driven by John I. Schonder, 1022 Spring Garden avenue. The auto of Ignacy Cieslak, 810 Progress street, also became involved, it was asserted. Concannon denied straddling the line and claimed another car coming in the opposite direction crossed the line and struck him. Shirk was taken to St. John's Hospital and Concannon was treated by a Bellevue physician.

JUDGE NAMES OVERSEERS

Applications for appointment of 300 overseers in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County were heard today by Judge James R. MacFarlane. In most instances the rival Republican factions sought overseers in the same districts and agreed on those to be named.

Many were appointed in McKees Rocks and other districts where a bitter primary contest tomorrow is in prospect.

Judge MacFarlane assigned Judges Elder W. Marshall and George V. Moore to have charge of the returning board which will organize Friday noon to begin the official count of ballots.

Homeopaths to Open Meet Here Tomorrow

The Pennsylvania State Homeopathic Medical Society will open its sixty-eighth annual meeting in William Penn Hotel tomorrow. The invocation will be given by the Rev. A. R. Robinson, pastor of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church. Speakers will be Dr. Anna Johnston, treasurer; Dr. H. S. Nicholson, and Dr. J. Sewell Stewart, all of Pittsburgh.

Pangborn, Herndon Again Set Hop Date

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., announced they expected to take off from Samushiro Beach, in Northern Japan, about September 26 on a non-stop trans-Pacific flight to the United States. A permit, still held up by the government, is expected by that date.

Vote Officials Face Fines for Ballot Errors

Any judge or inspector of election who fails to require voters to tear off a perforated triangular strip on the right hand corner of the ballot, before depositing the ballot in the ballot box, is liable to a fine of $10 for each such ballot deposited, under a new election law.

The slip bears a number which must correspond to the number on the ballot book stub, to insure that a genuine ballot is cast. The slip is torn off to prevent members of the election board from checking on how the elector voted. If the slip is not removed, the ballot is voided.

PLANE TO HUNT TOKIO FLIERS

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 14 (AP)—John Buffelen, backer of the trans-Pacific flight of Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, has retained two fliers to search for the missing airmen.

Ensign E. E. Dildine, Naval Reserve flier, and A. H. Ziegler, radio man, have signed a contract for 50 hours of flying time to hunt over southeastern Alaska for the Californians and the monoplane in which they left Tokio Tuesday.

The searchers expected to depart as soon as their amphibian plane could be made ready at an airport in Seattle, the proposed terminus of the trans-Pacific flight.

Coast guard craft and other vessels have been engaged for several days in the search.

'Air Mail Founding To Be Celebrated

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14 (AP)—Twenty years ago Lieut. Earle Ovington piloted the first official United States Air Mail under authorization of Frank H. Hitchcock, then postmaster general. The flight was a 10-mile trip across Long Island.

September 23 the flight will be commemorated here with Ovington, now a resident of Santa Barbara, Cal., at the controls of a tri-motored plane and Hitchcock, now a Tuscon, Ariz., publisher, as passenger. They will carry a special consignment of mail in a 1,000-mile flight over California and Arizona.

Part of Heligoland Crashes Into Sea

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 14 (AP)—For the first time in 17 years Porto Rico had a treasury surplus in the fiscal year ended June 30, Gov. Theodore Roosevelt's second annual report disclosed today. Conditions in general are somewhat better in the island, the report said.

WIFE DROWNED, 'PROF.' HELD

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 14 (AP)—Elisha Kent Kane, a professor at the University of Tennessee, was held in jail here on a charge of murder today while authorities investigated the death Friday of his wife, drowned while bathing with him at an isolated point on Chesapeake Bay. Kane denied killing his wife.

Dr. George K. Vanderslice, coroner of Elizabeth City County, planned an inquest today, and said the circumstances would be fully investigated. Other officers said Kane was arrested on information furnished by persons who said they heard a woman's scream and saw a man and a woman struggling in the water.

The arrest was made yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Graham, of Hilton village, parents of Mrs. Kane, about five hours after the funeral. Kane, 37, is a native of Kent, Pa., and has been connected with the University of Tennessee about 12 years.

THE TWO-PIECE FROCK IS FAVORED FOR SPORTS WEAR

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—No matter how many new styles come and go, it seems that the two-piece frock will always remain a favorite for sports wear. Remember with what joy we welcomed it when it first made its appearance a few seasons back. At that time, this model was used only for sports clothes. Gradually we found two-piece afternoon frocks and then, much to everyone's amazement, the two-piece gown was accepted for formal wear. It was such a comfortable style women wouldn't part with it for a second.

IN THE LAST season or two it has lost some of its popularity for afternoon and evening wear, but is still very much accepted in the sports world. Today Lenief shows you a sports frock of dark brown wool jersey flecked with an occasional thread of white which gives a delicate frosted effect. Wide lines of hand drawn work constitute the sole trimming of the jumper. A wide belt of brown leather is worn. Two circular godets give width to the skirt in front.

CHANTAL PRESENTS an afternoon frock, the major portion of which is in mulberry crepe romain. Dregs-of-wine romain in the skirt, trimming and separate scarf form an arresting color contrast and proves decidedly effective. Quite simple in cut and line, the interest of this good model lies in the color combination and graceful drapery.

CHURCH BATTLE GUARDS LEAVE

JONESBORO, Ark., Sept. 14.—(AP).—National guardsmen called here Thursday when a controversy between factions of the First Baptist Church reached alarming proportions, have been withdrawn.

At a conference yesterday Capt. Harry Eldridge, in charge of 150 guardsmen, and Mayor H. J. Bosler agreed that there seemed no further need of troops.

The troops were called by local officials, alarmed over strife caused by attempts of the Rev. Joe Jeffers, Baptist evangelist, to oust the Rev. Dow H. Heard from the church pastorate.

Jeffers preached at his tent tabernacle yesterday on "My Business in Jonesboro," a subject chosen as a result of an anonymous prayer circulated here reading:

"Oh, Lord, help me to keep my nose out of other people's business."

Dr. Heard made no direct reference to the disturbance of the past week in his sermon.

Ohio Man Plunges To Death From Peak

ESTES PARK, Colo., Sept. 14.—(AP).—A man whose identity has not been definitely determined fell to his death from the east side of Long's Peak in the Rocky Mountain National Park yesterday.

A report from the Jefferson Coal Company of Pinney Springs, O., was found in his pocket. The initials "R. B." were plain, but the surname was indistinct. It appeared to be "Key," "Keis" or "Kers." Efforts will be made today to remove the body from the rocky waste on which he fell.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Musical research has become a national pastime. It has moved from the dusty exclusiveness of the public library to the all-embracing hospitality of the front parlor.

Through old and forgotten songs which radio has retrieved, one may trace the course of American love-making, political campaigns, the rise of the prohibition movement, public spirit in time of war and the history of Tin Pan Alley.

Reliable spies tell me that in the music files of the radio caliphs there are more than 50,000 old tunes which at one time or another have been sawed out of the fiddles of the republic. Enough to take care of every convention between Gotham and the Golden Gate. Enough to satisfy the relic-hunting hobby of Henry Ford.

If the caliphs ever are hard-pressed for funds (and there is no sign right now they ever will be) they should be able to dispose of their old tune collections for what Wall Street today would call a pretty penny.

The collections, I am told, includes pieces of the days when men wore shawls and the land was filled with circuit riders. Some copies date back to 1840. Well, let's hear them. Let's hear how we have advanced—if at all—as a song-writing nation.

William J. Glassmacker assembled most of NBC's collection, assembled it in dusty old music shops in a thousand out-of-the-way places on the forgotten attic shelves of countless musicians. Of a family of music publishers, Glassmacker, as a boy, heard music talked and played on all sides. The dinner conversation was shop talk. In his school vacations he worked in the original music store of C. H. Ditson, then situated in Union Square. He never got far away from music.

WCAE at 8:30—James Melton singing "Hills of Home" and Rasbach's "Trees," a song particularly adapted to his superb voice . . . and on WCAE at 9:30, Lois Bennett interpreting Rubinstein's "Romance" and the Revelers in that exotic chant, "Song of India".

Real Folks change their time to 10:30 on KDKA. Duke Ellington promises to bring his entire outfit to KDKA studios at 11:45 and incidentally answer a challenge that Cab Calloway does a better job of "Tiger Rag" than he does . . . whoops! . . . when we hear "Moanin' Low" we always think of—right!—Libby Holman, the blues singer who was Allen Thrasher's first girl friend in Cincinnati years ago . . . she's on WJAS at 7:15 . . . there's a report that NBC let Kate Smith go freebootin' when it was discovered she "plugged" certain songs . . . anyhow she steps into the limelight bigger than ever with a commercial series on WJAS at 8:30 tonight.

Prominent Prosecutor Candidate For Bench

LONG EXPERIENCE AND BRILLIANT RECORD MAKE ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY JOHN F. HAGGERTY OUTSTANDING. SPEAKS OVER WCAE THIS EVENING AT 7:30 P. M.

John F. Haggerty

Among the imposing list of candidates for the bench of Common Pleas Court, of whom seven will be chosen at the forthcoming elections, there is none perhaps more worthy of a place upon this important tribunal than Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty. Mr. Haggerty is widely known as one of the most able and experienced of criminal prosecutors. He has in his years of activity both in private practice and as an Assistant District Attorney achieved a brilliant record and an enviable reputation. Since his appointment as a prosecutor in 1927 he has with characteristic courage and ability become one of the ablest members of the District Attorney's staff and has been largely instrumental in successfully prosecuting many outstanding criminal cases.

Highlights in Attorney Haggerty's career include the following data. He was born in Pittsburgh, July 9, 1887. He is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh Law School and was admitted to the bar in 1912. He has either as an attorney for the defense or for the state, participated in nearly 100 murder cases. He has never had a reversal in the appellate courts. His entire work in the District Attorney's office has been marked by able, courageous and impartial discharge of his duties.

Due to his unusual background of training and experience, John F. Haggerty is the ideal candidate for the judiciary. His keen understanding of criminal procedure and criminal jurisprudence as well as his recognized ability, excellently qualifs him for a place on the bench of Common Pleas Court.

Mr. Haggerty, whose name appears second on the ballot, has been giving a series of talks over station WCAE and will give his last talk this evening at 7:30 P. M.

WHAT LEADING INDEPENDENT REPUBLICANS

Say of the Candidacy of SENATOR W. D.

MANSFIELD

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

Congressman Clyde Kelly—

"The nomination and election of William D. Mansfield as county commissioner of Allegheny county will bring benefits to every citizen. As a state senator he has made a record of successful achievement through devotion to the duties of his office . . . He has been tested and never failed those who trusted him. . . . A successful business man, he will assure efficient, economical administration. A trained public servant, he will advance the interests of the public he serves. I gladly urge every citizen who desires effective service from his public officers to support Senator Mansfield."

Senator Frank J. Harris—

"Senator Mansfield has been ever watchful of the public's interests and has stood steadfast and fought hard for all progressive and humane legislation. He is especially deserving of the support of the voters of Allegheny county because of his energetic and enthusiastic efforts for election reforms . . . . He has consistently opposed every attempt to place additional burdens on the already overtaxed property holders of the state . . . . Senator Mansfield has always given closest attention to economic questions and if elected commissioner, every Allegheny county taxpayer may rest assured he will strive for a program of economy consistent with the needs of the county."

These men, all devoted to the very best interests of the public, have given Senator W. D. Mansfield's candidacy for the office of county commissioner their unqualified endorsement. They know his business ability, his long record of faithful legislative service to the people and his outstanding record as a successful man in public and private life. They are officials whose judgment has been proved sound and is trusted by the voters.

The Finest Buying Opportunity Offered in Twenty-Five Years!

Twenty-five years ago carpets were practically the only floor covering used . . . to be supplanted in the years since with rugs as the popular choice. Today the smart trend is back to carpets, and Boggs & Buhl, as Western Pennsylvania's foremost carpet and rug store, offers this opportunity to buy fine carpets at low prices that could not be equaled even twenty-five years ago!

How is it possible? Simply because this store, having such a tremendous outlet for carpets, can absorb more carpet than the average chain of stores, and consequently is in a position to get first choice and the best prices when the mills release surplus stocks.

This sale comprises the largest single carpet purchase in our history and coupled with our regular huge stocks presents a showing, that for selection and rock-bottom price, is so far ahead that comparison is impossible. A sale in a class by itself—and that class is on top.

THE ROAD BACK

By Erich Maria Remarque

CHAPTER IV.

A thick-set sergeant with a ruddy face elbows his way toward us. Over Kosole, who stands nearest him, he pours a flood of German words. Ferdinand winces, it so astonishes him.

"He talks the same as we do!" he says to Bethke in amazement; "what do you make of that, now?"

The fellow speaks German better and more fluently even than Kosole himself. He explains that he was in Dresden before the war, and had many friends there.

"In Dresden?" asks Kosole, even more staggered. "Why, I was there once myself for a couple of years—"

The sergeant smiles as though that identified him once and for all. He names the street where he had lived.

"Not five minutes from me!" exclaims Ferdinand excitedly. "Fancy not having seen one another! You will know Widow Pohl, perhaps, at the corner, Johannis street?"

But the sergeant does not know her and in exchange submits Zander, a clerk in the Treasury, whom Kosole in his turn cannot recall. Both of them, however, remember the Elbe and the castle, and their eyes light up with pleasure. Ferdinand seizes the sergeant by the arm. "Why, man—you talk German like a native! So you've been in Dresden, eh? Man, but what have we two been fighting about?"

TRADE POSSESSIONS

The sergeant laughs. He doesn't know, either. He takes out a packet of cigarets and offers it to Kosole, who reaches for it eagerly—there is not a man of us but would willingly give his soul for a good cigaret. Our own are made from beech leaves and dried grass, and even those are only the better sort. Valentin Laher declares that the ordinary ones are made of seaweed, and Valentin is a connoisseur of such things.

Kosole blows out the smoke lingeringly, with relish. We smile enviously. Laher changes color. His nostrils quiver. "Gives a draw," he says imploringly to Ferdinand. But before he can take the cigaret another American has offered him a packet of Virginia tobacco. Valentin looks at him incredulously. He takes it and smells it. His face lights up. Then reluctantly he returns the tobacco. But the other declines it and points energetically at the cockade on Laher's forage cap, which is sticking out from the top of his haversack.

PAPER BANDAGES

Valentin does not understand him. "He wants to exchange the tobacco for the cap badge," explains the sergeant from Dresden. But Laher understands that even less. This spanking tobacco for a tin cockade? The man must be balmy. Valentin would not swop the packet for a commission. He offers the cap, badge and all, to the American, and with trembling hands greedily fills his first pipe.

And now we realize what is expected—the Americans want to exchange. It is apparent that they have not long been in the war; they are still collecting souvenirs, shoulder straps, badges, belt buckles, decorations, uniform buttons. In exchange, we stock ourselves with soap, cigarets, cholocate and tinned meat.

They even want us to take a handful of money for our dog—but we draw the line there, let them offer what they will, the dog stays with us. On the other hand, our wounded bring us luck. One American, with so much gold in his mouth that his face looks like a brass foundry, is anxious to get some pieces of bandage with blood on them, in order to be able to demonstrate to the folk at home that they actually were made of paper. He is offering first-rate biscuits and, better still, an armful of real bandages in exchange. With the utmost satisfaction he carefully stows the rags away in his pocketbook, especially those belonging to Ludwig Breyer, for that is actual lieutenant's blood, you see. Ludwig must write on it in pencil the place, his name and regiment, so that everyone in America may see the thing is no fake. He is unwilling at first—but Willy persuades him, for we need good bandages sorely. And besides, the biscuits are an absolute godsend to him with his dysentery.

BOX OF IRON CROSSES

But Arthur Ledderhose makes the best coup. He produces a box of Iron Crosses that he found in an abandoned Orderly Room. An American, as wizened as himself, with just such another lemon-yellow face, wants to buy the whole box at one deal. But Ledderhose merely gives him one long, knowing slant from his squinting eyes. The American returns the look just as impassively, just as seemingly harmless. One suddenly saw in them a family likeness, as of two brothers. Something that has survived all the chances of war and death has flashed between them—the spirit of trade.

Ledderhose's antagonist soon sees that there is nothing doing. Arthur is not to be tricked; his wares will be decidedly more profitable disposed of in retail, so he barters them one by one, till the box is empty. About him there gradually rises up a pile of goods, even butter, and silk, eggs, linen and money, until finally he stands there on his bandy legs looking like a department store.

We take our leave. The Americans call and wave after us. The sergeant especially is indefatigable. Even Kosole is moved, so far as an old soldier can be. He too grunts a few words of farewell and waves his hand; but in him all this has still an air of menace. Then at last he ventures to Bethke, "Quite decent fellows, eh?"

Adolf nods. We go on in silence. Ferdinand lowers his head. He is thinking. Such is

MAN CARRIES TWO FROM FLAMES

Barking Dog Arouses Patton Township Family as Fire Destroys Dwelling

A mother, slightly burned, and her son, both overcome by smoke, were carried down flaming stairs early today by the husband, Carl Golightly, when fire destroyed their home in Bowden Hall, Patton Township.

The mother, Mrs. Anna Golightly, 24, suffered burns on the legs and arms. The son, Edward, 6, escaped injury. Volunteer firemen from Patton and Wilkins townships and Turtle Creek prevented the flames from spreading to adjoining homes.

Golightly was aroused from sleep by the family dog, Rex, which he had intended to sell. He found the house in flames.

The fire rounted the family of Mrs. Sara Dolley, 70, and four members, from their home adjoining the burning structure. The homes of George Glesner and Philip Mains, directly across the street, were slightly scorched by the flames.

Briand's Plans Good French But Poor English

—By Arthur 'Bugs' Baer—

News was light and frothy over the week-end, due to the fact that folks are still trying to get home from Labor Day.

Mahatma Gandhi not only refuses to visit Hollywood, but denies that he has his legs insured for a million dollars.

Aristide Briand says the only way to stop wars is to win 'em.

Aristide wants us to scrap the Army and Navy. Which is good French, but bad English.

While the humanitarians are crying over those Chinese floods they forget that the Mississippi is just as yellow and much closer.

We know the South is in a tough fix. But any woman will tell you that the trouble with cotton is that it ain't silk.

Synopsis

Ernst, a schoolboy when he enlisted in the war, is telling the story of a handful of friends who survived the long years of horror in the trenches. Peace was declared just as Wessling, one of the group fell mortally wounded. They march along the road toward home, war-weary, filled with a feeling of futility and foreboding. Meeting American troops on the road, the sight of the interminable lines of former enemies brings sharply home to them the fact that they were fighting to no purpose, that defeat was inevitable.

SMITH ASSAILS PARK FOR INACTION

District Attorney Basing Campaign on Promises, Rival in Race Asserts

District Attorney Park's campaign pledges of future performance were assailed today by Deputy Attorney General Ralph Smith, candidate against Park, in a noon meeting at independent headquarters. Park should be judged on his record in office and not by promises of what he will do after election, Smith said.

Smith pointed out that Park had been urged to institute grand jury investigations of palpable election frauds prior to this election and to delve into the manner in which fraudulent tax receipts were obtained, but ignored the demand, falling back on the explanation that he would start proceedings after the campaign. He said:

"The District Attorney will be the chief beneficiary of the thousands of phoney votes and fake assessments which he has done nothing to stop. Of these votes he is certain.

"In return for the votes of the average honest citizen he offers another promise that he will some day act as if he were the District Attorney in fact, as well as in name. Let the citizens of Allegheny County judge this latest promise of future action by past and present failures to act."

Smith recited a long list of gang murders and bombings which he said the District Attorney had failed to investigate or "seriously attempt" to solve.

Receives Ninth Term in Jail Within Year

A few hours after he had been released from the Allegheny County Workhouse, where he had served his eighth 30-day term within the year, Tom Russell found himself again the guest of the county—this time for 60 days.

When Tom left the workhouse he was handed the dollar which is presented to each departing guest, and went to the downtown district to celebrate. A short time later he entered a restaurant, where he ordered almost everything on the menu. The management investigated his ability to pay and his pockets proved empty. Police were called.

"Sixty days," was the verdict of Magistrate Rothenberg.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 14.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

France gave Jimmy Walker the Legion of Honor because he didn't bring 19 other mayors with him. Every time the Republicans start to pin a rosette of poison ivy on him in New York he is sipping a stein of beer with Hindenburg, shooting craps with Premier MacDonald, or doing an adagio dance with Mussolini. No man was ever so investigated on one side and dined on the other. He keeps just three decorations ahead of the investigating committee.

800 ELECTRICAL MEN PLANNING BUSINESS AID

Louis K. Comstock Tells Convention Here of Plan To Give Thousands Jobs

Development of "a rudder" for the perfect co-operation of employer and labor is a need of industry, Louis K. Comstock, of Washington, president of the Electrical Guild of North America, declared before delegates to the International Association of Electrical Inspectors' convention today in the William Penn Hotel.

The convention, which consists of joint meetings of the eastern and western sections, will continue through Thursday with more than 800 delegates expected. Mr. Comstock, also chairman of the Council of Industrial Relations of the Electrical Construction Industry of United States and Canada, spoke at a joint luncheon of the Electric League of Pittsburgh and the international organization.

Through a program soon to be launched by the guild, Comstock announced, thousands of unemployed workers in the industry would be put to work. The plan will provide work through small permanent improvements throughout the nation, he declared. Pointing out the difficulty between labor and industry, he said:

"There is set no developed underlying philosophy to serve us as a rudder, a steering apparatus. Broadly speaking, the aims of these parallel groups are identical, but without a general underlying basis of understanding of the direction in which to move."

Two general business sessions today were devoted to technical discussions. An informal party is scheduled for tonight, while a dinner dance will be the feature social event of the convention tomorrow night.

Service To His Fellow Citizens

Just a part of the story of what Commissioner Charles C. McGovern has done for the Citizens of Allegheny County

For several years Charles C. McGovern, as Registration Commissioner, County Controller and Commissioner, has been fighting the battle of the taxpayers of Allegheny County single handed.

Because his years of unselfish service have been years of increasing warfare against election frauds, waste, graft and bungling by an insolent, brazen, tax-eating, extravagant county administration drunk with power, the remarkable record of constructive achievement that this man has built up have been overshadowed by his deserved reputation as a fearless, courageous fighter.

IN THE "EIGHT SPENDFUL YEARS" OF THE BABCOCK-ARMSTRONG REGIME IN THE COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE, McGOVERN VOTED FOR ALL OF THE IMPROVEMENTS BUT HE OBJECTED TO THE WASTE AND EXTRAVAGANCE OF CARRYING OUT THESE PROJECTS.

He uncovered and killed secret payrolls in the offices of the county commissioners whereby county employes had been on double salary for years at tremendous cost to the county.

Caused the names of hundreds of persons to be struck from county payrolls who never performed a day's service except to political henchmen.

Stopped graft in the expense account system of hundreds of employes whereby the taxpayers paid for shaves, shines and service and rental of cars owned by these employes.

Wiped out the old pay system which cost the county thousands in wasted time and caused to be installed a modern system of payment by check.

Struck down the system whereby County Clerks drew one million eight hundred thousand dollars a year from county treasury, depositing it in their own bank account and paid county employes, which resulted in charges of fraud and forgery. The system was so perfect that no one could tell how many thousands were lost to the county—hundreds of names on the payroll being signed in the same handwriting.

Halted loss of thousands of dollars each year through employes of Department of Public Works selling county supplies out of county warehouses and from railroad sidings.

Stopped the County Commissioners' office and other county officials from doing private work with county men and materials in return for votes. Thousands of dollars a year of tax money has been saved on this item.

Laid bare the three and a half million dollar airport blunder and the half-million airport swindle as well as the half-million dollar Allegheny River Boulevard bungle, and the quarter of a million dollar Shades Run Bridge failure.

FOR YEARS HE FOUGHT ELECTION CHEATERS ALONE. NOW THE COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION AND CITIZENS' GROUPS FIGHT WITH HIM.

Fought tax increases each January for six years and because he was single-handed he was beaten. Now, with the people of the county back of him he'll win and the Real and Personal taxable property of the home owners will have a chance.

The new jail annex at Parkview is a monument to McGovern's persistence. He fought for it for years. The Judges of the Courts paid him tribute for this new departure in prison rehabilitation, where down-and-outers get a chance.

With the people behind him, not only in the primaries, but in the general election, the bunglers and the swindlers will be required to pay back into the county treasury thousands of dollars of tax-money they have squandered in the past six years.

The load of debt carried by the people of Allegheny County has become so great that home-owners cannot stand it. The millage for bonds, interest, etc., has jumped under Armstrong's regime, from 2¼ mills in 1923 to 4¾ mills in 1931. Thirty cents of every taxpayer's dollar goes for the payment of debt. During a period of six years, the assessed valuation has increased $550,000,000. Just compare these increases under Armstrong:

Year	Bonds Interest Millage	Bonded Debt	Assessed Valuation
1925	2¼	$ 54,000,000	$ 2,600,000,000
1931	4¾	104,000,000	3,150,000,000
Increase	2½	$ 50,000,000	$ 550,000,000

Compare these maintenance rents for janitors, cleaners, etc.:

Court House, half of City-County Building, Old City Hall, Memorial Hall and Morgue (from Controller's report)	$806,000
Union Trust Building	$275,000
Farmers Bank Building	175,000
First National Building	150,000
Koppers Building	280,000

Relief Workers Appeal For Ingredients and Cash in Projects to Aid Jobless

Preservation of produce for the needy of the Pittsburgh district was going ahead today under the auspices of the Surplus for the Needy Committee. The plant which the committee has opened on Spring Garden avenue has been functioning daily to relieve the wants of the unfortunate of the district throughout the winter months.

An appeal was made today for contributions of cabbage, which will be made into sauerkraut by the canners. The appeal for contributions of cash was also being pressed. Cash contributions, Attorney Harry I. Miller, chairman, said, would be used to purchase sugar and other ingredients.

The women's committee, under the leadership of Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., was working among the farmers of the district gathering surplus fruits and vegetables.

It is the plan of the committee to furnish more than 5,000 needy families of the district with five cans of vegetables each week over a period of 32 weeks.

The first of a shipment of 250,000 cans was due here late today, officials said. The cans are coming from the American Can Company, who manufactured the cans after materials had been donated by sheet tin companies of the Pittsburgh district.

BEAVER WANTS STATE POLICE

BEAVER, Pa., Sept. 14.—An appeal to Gov. Pinchot for state police to patrol polling places in Beaver County at tomorrow's primaries was being considered today by candidates on the Independent Republican ticket.

William F. Schutte, Independent candidate for District Attorney, said a conference late today would determine whether troopers would be asked for to guarantee an honest election.

In an address in Franklin Township, Saturday night, Schutte charged that workers of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation in Aliquippa were being intimidated and ordered to vote the regular Republican ticket or lose their jobs.

Schutte is supported by the Pinchot executive committee of Beaver County. They also are backing Arthur Combs and W. G. Coulter for County Commissioner.

The "Regular Republican" ticket includes A. B. de Castrique for District Attorney and Joseph J. Zimmerman and Howard Hunter for County Commissioners.

Troopers Ordered To Fayette Polls

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 14.—State troopers will patrol Fayette County during tomorrow's primary. At the request of Sheriff Tom Aubrey, a candidate for County Treasurer, Gov. Pinchot has had a squad of troopers sent here. A telegram to that effect has just been received in Uniontown.

The officers will be here some time during the night and will remain until the polls close.

Prince Leopold Dies; Ex-Kaiser's Cousin

Wymard Routs Youth Who, Given Ride, Tries Holdup

N. L. (Skip) Wymard, judicial candidate for the County Court bench, routed a holdup man, to whom he had given a "lift" as he was on his way to Coraopolis to address a political meeting, according to Attorney A. E. Sheridan, the driver of the machine.

Sheridan said he and Wymard were near the Coraopolis golf links, when they were accosted by a youth about 20 years old. Thinking that he was bound for the meeting, they picked him up.

The youth asked Sheridan and Wymard to stop in a lonely part of the road, declaring that he lived over the hill. As he stepped out of the car, according to Sheridan, he drew a revolver and demanded their money. Wymard hit the youth's arm, knocking the revolver to the running board.

The youth recovered the gun and ran into the woods. The men made no effort to catch him.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

THIS YARN CONCERNS two characters that will be known as Margie and Bill. You have heard of Margie quite often. You have heard of her conquests, her husbands, her loves, her jewels, her travels, her successes and her follies. Her name has made the front pages more than once. And her picture has graced the pages of almost every magazine in the country.

This story, however, is somewhat different from the hundreds that have been written about her. And because I fail to see how it could do anyone any good, I'll merely call her Margie and let it go at that.

On the other hand, Bill is a new character. You have never heard of Bill. Neither had I. That is, I never heard of him until the other night. And when I did hear of him that evening, it was to learn a story. The story of a fool who loves a woman . . .

Some two years ago Bill was a banker of international repute. His money transactions ran into millions. His name was a power in Wall street. He stood for Success, with a capital S, the most fleeting of all conditions.

Ah, that Bill was a man! During the day he worked with all the energy that was in him. But when night fell he forgot his worldly routine. And he went out and played. Yes, he played just as earnestly as he worked.

The night clubs welcomed Bill with open arms. And why not? He spent lavishly. He tipped recklessly. He loved the life. The life loved him. The heavy spender and reckless tipper is king on Broadway.

Bill's stamping ground in those days was a club where men were cover charges and women were incidental. They bowed to Bill. They scraped for Bill. And they worried about Bill. For Bill was a spender.

When collections were taken, Bill was the first one to dig. When Texas Guinan raised that trusty right hand and told the customers that a certain little chorus girl needed money for an operation, it was Bill who always made the first contribution. When that funny little waiter at the corner table felt that he could run his own beanery, it was Bill who was asked for the money.

And when the doorman's wife was ill and needed attention, it was Bill who learned the first details. He never failed any one, whether the cause was just or not.

And then Bill—the great banker by day, the great spender by night—met Margie. . .

This portion of the story must be passed over with great rapidity. For I do not know much about it. I know only the fact that Bill was seen everywhere with Margie. And I know, too, that being everywhere with Margie costs lots and lots of money—something that many a man will attest to.

There were reports of presents. Beautiful presents from Bill. That glorious neckpiece. That huge, sparkling diamond. This. And that. And the other. And they said then that Bill was falling in love.

Shortly after that, Margie married a phony duke . . .

One night last week I wandered into a night club in the upper Fifties. There were celebrities present—a hundred of them and more. My eyes roved over those people who pay so heavily for their play. And they fell upon a tall, thin man who sat all alone in the rear.

A bottle of charged water, unopened, stood before him. And three packages of cigarettes. Big eyes. Hair cropped close. Gray. A sad, sad face. A brown suit, hanging loosely about him. A tie that did not match. Nervous. Hands just a trifle unsteady. And smoking one cigarette after the other.

No one paid any attention to him. Just left him alone. Left him sitting there smoking. And watching a cute little blonde who sat some 20 tables further forward. He was watching Margie.

Some one who knew sat down next to me. I asked about that man. And I learned about Bill. For that man was Bill.

"Yes," said the man who knew, "he's close to the rocks now. But he won't give up. Follows her from place to place. Business went bad. But Bill doesn't care. He's thinking of Margie. He loves Margie. Poor guy" . .

It was 5:30 in the morning. Margie rose from her chair. Her escort took her arm. They swept majestically down the room. They passed Bill. Margie stopped. She put out her hand.

Bill was on his feet. This was his minute. He had waited five hours for just a few fleeting seconds. His eyes shone. His lips trembled. He pulled her just a trifle closer. And she took her hand away.

"I'm in a hurry," she said. "Glad to have seen you. Yes, of course. Just a second, George. I'll be right with you. Yes, of course. Good night."

And she walked out of the room with her escort—George. I followed.

"But," she was saying, "the man bores me."

When I strolled back to my table, I glanced over at Bill. He sank back against the wall. His eyes closed for a minute. And then he called for his check. Not more than two minutes had elapsed since Margie had left. But what more was there for Bill?

I followed Bill. He hurriedly took his hat. Quickly he tipped the girl. And he ran to the bolted door and placed his face against the little porthole that permits one to look into the street.

Outside, George was helping Margie into a beautiful machine. The chauffeur was smiling. He slammed the door of the car. A whirring noise. And they were gone.

Bill shivered slightly. He opened the door himself. Walking slowly down the street, he vanished into the haze of the early dawn.

Disler Cites Taxes In Council Drive

Thomas S. Disler, independent candidate for Council in a final campaign statement, said:

"The tax question is the real issue of this campaign. When increased income was needed, a few thousand dollars per home were tacked on the valuation of thousands of homes. If you doubt this statement ask any property owner in the Nineteenth Ward."

300 HOMELESS IN NORTHWEST FOREST FIRES

Floyd Gibbons Lends His Camping Party's Mules to Fight Yellowstone Blaze

ST. PAUL, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—The task of caring for more than 300 homeless persons in the grass and timber fire territory in Northwestern Minnesota was under way in earnest today.

Three persons were known dead, about a dozen were injured and one man was reported missing as a result of the fires which started Friday night and continued to smoulder today.

The fires were reported under control early today, although a strong wind would again make them menacing, rangers said. About 90 families have lost their homes. In the Baudette region a crew of men was put to work burying dead animals, which threatened to become a menace to health.

LIVINGSTON, Mont., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—A camping party headed by Floyd Gibbons, radio announcer, has lent its mules to aid in fighting a menacing fire the party discovered in Yellowstone National Park Saturday night.

Traveling with pack animals toward the Teton Mountains, the group found the 100-acre blaze 25 miles south of Basin Creek, in a remote section of the park, and reported it to the authorities. It was advancing toward a heavy stand of timber. Fifty men were sent to the scene.

PASTOR LAUDS PARK'S RECORD

That life in continental Europe is being reproduced in some of the worst phases of Pittsburgh's politics was the opinion of the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan, expressed in his sermon last night in the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, East End. He said:

"The election of District Attorney is vital. The Wickersham Commission says that deficiency here is the greatest single cause of judicial miscarriage.

"District Attorney Andrew T. Park has made a notable record. He was not selected as a candidate of the machine politicians. Some of them have since declared for him, but they no more indorse his principles than they did Gov. Pinchot's, whom they also supported. Park secured the indictment of Mayor Kline and says he will prosecute. Those who believe in his personal honesty will support him."

Marie Dressler Plans Future While Illness Keeps Makeup Off

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 14.

Illness has kept Marie Dressler out of makeup for three months, but she goes on staunchly planning for the future.

When the doctors give their permission, the veteran star will resume her studio work in "Emma." After that, she and Wallace Beery will be reunited in a German story called "Fernie as Guest." Needless to say, no such title will find its way to the electric lights.

Marie [illegible] to the studio of a pure strain of the Negro couple who have been with her for years. Clarke D. Brey, an intimate friend, also stays at the house part of the time.

It will be another month before there can be any thought of picture work.

CLOSE TO TRUTH

AFTER DARK IN HOLLYWOOD

Summer [illegible] but Hollywood still likes to dance under the stars. The once sacred Embassy Roof is newly opened. Maybe you'll feel better to know that Jean Harlow and Pettie Sidney Fox[illegible] were the only film stars who ventured to tango before the opening night crowd. And, comforting news to the girls whose hair is at that awkward length, not a single bob tossed defiance to fashion's new decree. Here's a note of hope, as well, to tuxedo-hating males. Gene Beau Markey wore a business suit. Who was that girl in green he was dancing with? More questions—How does Roscoe Arbuckle rate such a pretty girl as Addie McPhail? When does Woody Van Dyke sleep? And why does morning come so soon after a night like this?

Helen Chandler Again Lone Girl in Film

Helen Chandler is working in a picture with no other girls in it for the second time in succession. When Richard Barthelmess selected Helen for his lead in "The Last Flight," there were many envious glances cast her way, for all actresses know what a lucky break it is for a girl to have all the photography, erudition, expended on her alone. Then came "Heart and Hand," with two men and a girl. Helen Chandler again was signed for a one-woman film, with Kent Douglas and Walter Huston.

Youth Alive

Sally Eilers and James Dunn live their young lives fully, if not too wisely, in "The Bad Girl," the much-talked-about film coming to the Fulton Thursday.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(And they slaughter houses!!)

That an actor went up to Equity headquarters yesterday and paid his dues—so the entire office staff finally went to lunch!

That the Central Park mazdas are turned on before sunset and turned off before the sun rises. (Dopes!)

That a divorced femme or one who gets a divorce in Britain (so that the records will be accurate) cannot be presented at court or gain admission to the Royal Enclosure at Ascot, or visit the Palace. Outside of those boring functions they have a swell time.

That Alice White, the movie star, once was a phone operator.

That Finley Peter Dunne, creator of "Mr. Dooley" and other grand characters, invented the expression "southpaw" for portsiders.

That the speed limit on our Speedway is 35 m. p. h.

That England controls its radio stations and no advertising is permitted over the air. (Oh, to be in England, etc.!)

That there were grocers in Johnstown, Pa., named (Joe) Love—(Bill) Sunshine—and (George) Bliss. It now is Love & Sunshine.

That the word "air" means information.

That "fool" formerly meant a term of affection, you fool!

That Congress permits 2,000,000 gallons of liquor to be distilled annually for "medicinal purposes." (Tee, hee.)

That a Park Avenue deb was stricken with ptomaine persening after eating in New York's most expensive confectionery.

That Canzoneri won decisively enough from Berg, but that one punch in the 8th round was lower than the stock you were advised to buy, put away and forget!

That the best way to make a man dislike you is to call his bluffs.

That humming birds cannot walk. They can, however, dart backwards, or in any direction, something other birds cannot do.

That the Broadway trams (trolleys to you!) only stop at even-numbered streets. (Lived here all my life and just discovered it!)

That 75,000 locals have permits to carry pistols.

That Weber & Fields have been signed for the radio at a wage only second to Amos and what's his name-again?

That if there were no dust in the atmosphere it would never rain or snow. (What would you people amount to without me?)

That a yellow arm band is worn by the deaf, dumb and blind people in Denmark to protect them in traffic when crossing streets.

That that one reminds me of this silly story: A girl ran across a street in heavy traffic and a man on the other side warned her: "You'd better not do that again, because a truck will mow you down!"

So she did—and it did!!!

That if it weren't for the Pathfinder I wouldn't even know that the U. S. has 47 kinds of stamps and 15 different shades. Imagine!

That I could keep on like this for days and days but you ingrates wouldn't appreciate it. Oh, I know, I know! You're all alike.

That the strongest of all antipathies is the antipathy of a second-rate mind to a first-rate one.

That, to hear the wags tell it, if all the columnists were laid end to end—it wouldn't be a bad idea.

That people who growl at dramatic critics should kiss their tootsies. They're the ones who had to sit through the season's first 10 ordinary shows so that playgoers could be warned to save their coin.

That the burlegshows have swiped most of the vulgarities from the profane revues, which probably belonged to them.

That they are so tough over in Milton Berles' neighborhood they use B. A. Rolfe's Band for slumber music.

And that things are so quiet down in the Wall Street sector—you can hear the dividends pass.

Guild's Stars In Debut

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, stars of many Theater Guild productions, will make their initial appearance from the speaking screen tomorrow evening in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer world premiere of "The Guardsman," in the Astor Theater.

The two stars went to the West Coast to begin work in "The Guardsman" immediately after completing their road tour last spring in "Elizabeth the Queen." They have returned to New York, and soon will start work on a new Theater Guild production, "Reunion in Vienna."

Further motion picture plans will be deferred until the end of the theatrical season.

Hotel Interests To Organize Here

More than a score of local restaurant and hotel interests will be represented September 17, at a meeting called to form a Pittsburgh chapter of the National Restaurant Association. Tentative plans were made last Friday to discuss further plans at this meeting.

Have you what is commonly called that Tired Feeling?

"I just can't go on"
. . . how often you hear this

So often the reason is simple—that good body of ours has "run-down" under the strain of our way of living . . . pressure of work and worry.

Those important precious red-blood-cells that mean so much to vitality become lowered in count . . . the hemoglobin percentage begins to fall and we wonder "what is the matter."

If this is your trouble, why not take steps to overcome it—remembering that a "tired feeling" may be a warning . . . so are pimples, boils and paleness. A general run down condition means a lack of normal resistance to infection and disease.

For generations S.S.S. as a tonic has been helping people gain New Strength, better health and happiness. Its successful record of over 100 years in restoring strength and vitality to the blood surely warrants your giving it a good trial.

Helps you build New Red-Blood-Cells

"Mother, I do wish you were well and strong"

It is important to know what the red-blood-cells are the ships that sail in the blood stream and carry nourishment and oxygen to all parts of the body. Whenever the number is materially reduced, lowered vitality ensues and the victim becomes more susceptible to the ravages of various diseases.

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The front circle shows about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic inch of blood. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body—they also remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Weak red-blood-cells—only 40 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to refresh flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is often responsible for toxic weakness, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils.

Don't let them count you out!

when the GOING is hard

WHEN the going is hard, astute advertisers know that it pays to concentrate in a hard-hitting publication! They find it pays to invest their dollars in white space that carries their selling messages straight as a rifle-ball to the bull's-eye of the richest and most responsive market—at the lowest cost per family.

And that means concentration in The American Weekly, the fittest of them all.

The records made by this mighty magazine at a time when sales have been coming hard has opened the eyes of many a national advertiser.

The year 1930 established a high linage record for all time for The American Weekly . . . The year 1931 will surpass last year's sensational record.

No other national magazine can match these amazing gains.

You may be interested in knowing WHY.

With a four-color page more than twice as big as any page in any other magazine, The American Weekly reaches 5,500,000 families who dwell in the most prosperous areas of this nation . . . The American Weekly does this at a cost of less than one-third cent per family.

With an editorial content so absorbing that it captures and holds the interest of every member of every family, The American Weekly is the most widely read publication on earth.

Reader-interest plus lowest-cost-per-family brings the most sales per advertising dollar.

The telling drive of The American Weekly is irresistible to dealer and consumer alike . . . The dealer is quick to stock and display American Weekly advertised merchandise because he knows that this mighty magazine reaches hundreds and thousands of his customers.

Consumer response is fast because The American Weekly's tremendous selling page tempts the eyes of 5,500,000 families who, in spite of the pessimists, have the desire to own and have money in the bank with which to buy.

If you are wondering about today's, tomorrow's or next year's sales cast a quick eye over the unmatched advantages The American Weekly has to offer.

The American Weekly dominates the urban markets by concentrating 70% of its total circulation in 578 of America's 997 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over. (1930 U. S. census figures.)

In each of 152 cities, it reaches one out of every two families

In 108 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families

In an additional 146 cities, 30 to 40%

In another 172 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, more than 1,700,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy The American Weekly.

Cock-A-Doodle-Doo

The American Weekly advertising revenue and linage in September shows a substantial increase over September, 1930, and continues similar advertising records made in the first six months of this year, as well as in July and August.

MEINE FACES ROBINS TODAY

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Robins Lose Nickname. Grove's Record Climbs.
Harris Belies Figures. Buc Chance Reduced.
Gougler Sees Changes. Vines Wins on Class.

LAST OF BROOKLYN UNDER OLD TITLE

IN THE THREE GAME series starting at Forbes Field today, you'll be seeing at the Brooklyn club for the last time as the Robins. It's the farewell Pittsburgh appearance of the Flatbush troupe under that familiar nickname for the general understanding is that Manager Wilbert Robinson is to pass out when his contract expires at the close of the present season. There's to be a new skipper in charge when the outfit toes the scratch for the pennant race of 1932, and that means a new nickname as well, as with Uncle Robbie goes the club which he has so long directed must necessarily cease to be the Robins.

Wilbert Robinson

It was from the name of the veteran manager that the present title was derived and without Robinson, it just won't fit. It isn't like such labels as the Pirates, the Giants, the Cubs, the Athletics, the Yankees, the White Sox or any of the rest. Every other club in the two big leagues has a nickname that survives regardless of managerial changes, but with Brooklyn it's different. When Robbie goes the nickname of Robins must go with him.

IT WON'T BE [illegible] Dodgers, Kings or [illegible] Club. When it first entered the National League in 1890 it was known simply as the Brooklyns or the [illegible], because of the players matched with their weekly [illegible] grooms. Next it was the Trolley Dodgers, because of the Brooklyn trolley lines [illegible].

Then the owners bought the Baltimore club in 1898 and transferred the pick of the Oriole stars to Brooklyn, taking Ned Hanlon along as manager. The shifted players included such notables as Willie Keeler, Hugh Jennings, Joe Kelley, Bill Dahlen, Dan McGann, Jay Hughes, Jimmy McJames and Al Maul, and they formed such an all-star combination that they were dubbed the Superbas.

THEN BY [illegible] Brooklyn had [illegible] Pittsburgh [illegible] and [illegible] Superbas. The Washington [illegible] kept through the period of 1899 and 1900 the name of the manager and he became [illegible] Nap Rucker, Jack Coffey, Doc Scanlan, Harry Lumley and Bill Dahlen, but after Robinson took hold in 1914 it was changed to the Robins. Now, after 18 seasons that name is to fade out, too, and when the club makes its next visit here in 1932 it will be the Dodgers again, or something entirely new.

THAT YOU CAN'T always judge a pitcher by his record of games won and lost in the minor leagues has been demonstrated again in the case of Bill Harris, the sensational new Pirate. For Fort Worth in the Texas League, before coming to the Rovers, Harris won only 12 games while losing 21. Hardly an impressive record, but Bill Hinchman is too shrewd a scout to be fooled by figures and he hurriedly recommended the purchase of Harris as the best pitcher he had seen in moons. Harris has more than vindicated Hinchman's judgment by allowing only one run in his first two games. There was a reason for his huge defeat total in Fort Worth. In 12 of the 21 games he lost, his mates failed to score behind him.

Skip Gougler

D. ROSCOE "SKIP" GOUGLER, freshman football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, is a former Duquesne University grid mentor. He assisted Jake Stahl, one-time Pitt line star, back in 1926 before going to Lafayette as assistant to Jock Sutherland in 1927.

Gougler was commenting the other day on the advance that Duquesne has made in football, and in discussing comparative material remarked on the difference between present Duke standards and those of the old days, when a 145-pounder was not considered too light to play an end position.

SKIP BY THE way, has been Dr. Sutherland's right-hand man for quite a few years. He assisted Sutherland with the varsity at Lafayette in 1924-25-26, and has been freshman coach at Pitt since 1927.

Gougler probably would make a good college head coach, but prefers to work with the freshmen and prepare them for the varsity, evidently getting quite a kick out of seeing his former charges earn their varsity spurs.

WHEN LEFTY GROVE hung up his twenty-ninth victory of the year for the A's against the Browns Saturday, he placed to his credit the best record made in the American League since Jim Bagby won 31 games for Cleveland in 1920, and he also passed the highest mark reached in the National League since Grover Alexander won 33 games for the Phillies in 1916. The largest total amassed in either league in the meantime was 28, reached by Grove himself in the American last year and by Dazzy Vance for Brooklyn in the National in 1924.

IF GROVE CAN win three games more before the season closes 13 days hence he will attain the highest mark in victories reached in the American League in 21 years (since Walter Johnson won 36 for the Senators in 1913).

If Grove, charged with only three reverses so far, goes through to the finish undefeated, or if he loses one game and wins at least one other to offset it, he will beat the record for major league pitching percentage, set at .872 by Joe Wood, of the Red Sox, in 1912, with 34 won and five lost. Grove up to date holds the remarkable percentage of .906 for the season. His all-time major league record, not counting world series competition, shows 144 games won against only 60 lost. Of his last 108 games he has lost only 16.

YESTERDAY'S DEFEAT by Brooklyn, while the Cubs were winning a pair, further reduced the Pirates' slim chance for the first division. If the Robins only break even in 12 games the Bucs will have to win 12 out of 13 to finish ahead of them.

If the Cubs take only half of their 10 games, the Rovers will have to capture all of their 13 remaining events to beat them out. The locals must win eight out of 13 to have a .500 percentage at the close.

Ellsworth Vines

THE CAPTURE OF the national singles tennis championship by Ellsworth Vines, Jr., the gangling 19-year-old collegian from Pasadena, though a sensational achievement in view of his youth, was none the less convincing. It can't be said to have been due to a mere flash of great form. For prior to the title tournament, Vines had been the outstanding amateur of the year. He captured the national clay court crown, he won the big Seabright, Newport and Longwood Bowl invitation tourneys one after another, he beat Champion Johnny Doeg twice, and out of about 65 matches played during the season he lost only four. Behind his playing skill is a fighting heart, as evidenced by the fact that in nearly all of his important matches he came from behind to win. He's class all the way, no doubt about that, and he promises to survive long as one of the greatest tennis figures of all time.

VETERAN SQUAD IMPRESSES CRITIC

Note—Tad Jones, former Yale coach, visited the University of Pittsburgh's training camp at Windber, Pa., several days ago. Herewith is his report of the Panthers' prospects for the season. Tad's play for Carnegie Tech appears this morning.

By TAD JONES

Member, All America Board of Football

PITTSBURGH has 1931 football [illegible] season with 10 regulars from last year's eleven still in college.

Tad Jones

Capt. Eddie Baker alone is missing. Right here I might suggest that the task of filling Baker's shoes very easily may cause Coach Jock Sutherland some sleepless nights for quarterbacks like Baker do not grow on trees. And I might add also that often-times veteran backs do not develop as well as less experienced players. This is just another way of saying that Sutherland and his coaches have plenty of work ahead of them for it will not be possible for Pitt to coast through on experience alone.

That Pitt will get off to a good start may be concluded. That a team elected to championship honors in a rebuilding year is possible. Their opening game with [illegible] Plays every member of the squad loves the game and is keen to play it. And therein lies Pitt's best opportunity for greatness this fall—it being the fact that 10 regulars still are in college. A veteran eleven must continue to develop [illegible] It does not stand still.

TEN VETS IN LINEUP

Unless something unforeseen occurs it is safe to assume that the Pitt starting lineup will include all of the 10 regulars now on the squad. Capt. Eddie Hitshberg and Rip Collins will be at their old positions on the ends of the line and a pretty pair they are. MacMurdo and Quatse will be in the tackle jobs. These two may develop into the best pair of tackles Pitt ever has had. MacMurdo especially has all the essentials of a great player.

Morris and Milligan, guards, are not large men, but they are fast and aggressive interferers, qualities demanded by Sutherland of all his guards. Completing the rush line is Daugherty at center, who has done a great job in the position for the past two years.

Behind the line are Reider and Heller, who stepped into the varsity in their first year with Clark at fullback and, in all likelihood, Hogan at quarter.

Reider, Heller and Clark have won their spots but Hogan remains an experiment. He will weigh about 180 pounds and if he wins the regular berth will be the heaviest man in a right backfield. He kicks well and should develop into a fine blocking back. It will be his lot to back the line defensively for Reider at 156 pounds, Heller at 169 and Clark at 160 really are not rugged enough for this job. This is not quite the ideal arrangement, for a quarterback has plenty to do without the responsibility of the wear and tear

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SATURDAY: BILLY BURTON DROVE 168 HOURS WITHOUT A STOP—Smiling Billy Burton, a demonstration endurance driver, who lives at 12354 Wyoming avenue, Detroit, has made a profession of driving for long periods of time while handcuffed to the wheel and during the last five years has driven 2,915 hours in 26 long drives, and total distance of 55,825 miles. His record of 168 hours of continuous driving was established in Schenectady, N. Y., the run being sponsored by a newspaper of that city. SAMMY STRANG WAS FINED FOR HITTING A HOMER—In 1905, when the New York Giants were playing Brooklyn in a crucial series, Strang came to bat in the ninth inning with men on first and second and no one out. McGraw signaled for a bunt, but the opposing pitcher and first baseman came in so close that Strang played the unexpected and put the ball over the fence for a homer, drawing McGraw's wrath and a fine of $25. Strang, whose real name is Strang Nicklin, now lives in Chattanooga, Tenn. THE LAST WORDS OF THE SCHOOLBOY NAPOLEON—While at school in Brienne, young Napoleon was a most prolific writer. His written notes of the time embrace several thousand pages. The last words the future Emperor wrote as a schoolboy were "Saint Helene, petite ile" (St. Helena, little island). Did the boy have a prophetic glimpse of his future glory destined to end in his banishment and death on the very island he mentioned last?

The Pirates and Robins will renew diamond hostilities this afternoon at Forbes Field with both teams well Pullmanized as a result of their Sunday activities. The rival clubs were back in Pittsburgh this morning after fighting it out yesterday in the Flatbush whither the clubs hustled after their Saturday scraps in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

The Buccos took another on the button, just as they generally do when they make one of those one-day excursions to the Flatbush. If all the games lost by the Pirates in this manner in the past couple of years were laid end to end, the fans probably would blame the poor standing of the Buccos on this sad development. The score of the clash yesterday was 6 to 5, the Robins coming from behind in the ninth to score three runs to win.

Heinie Meine is due to twirl for the Freebooters this afternoon, and if Heinie can turn in another of his pleasing performances he may boost his winning string to 17 contests. Truly, the Crown Prince of Luxemburg is working like a star. Uncle Robbie has Joe Shaute and Watson Clark primed for the Buccos. The clubs will continue their series through Wednesday. To date the invaders have won 10 of 19 games. Their victory of yesterday increased the gap separating the two clubs to four and one-half games. As the Buccos have only 11 more games to play, they will have to spurt if they are to finish in a money berth.

Any time Glenn Wright gets into the thick of a fight against the Pirates you can look for trouble. The former star of the Pittsburgh infield uncorked a double that gave the Robins the tying and winning runs in the ninth after the Pirates had gone into the last round with a two-run advantage.

Advices from Brooklyn are to the effect that the Pirates hammered enough hot smashes off the form of Fred Heimach to win an ordinary battle, but the veteran southpaw recovered most of the drives and turned them into assets instead of liabilities.

BUCCOS RECALL FARMHANDS

Three promising Pirate rookies farmed out for further seasoning have been recalled and will rejoin the local club next spring prior to the departure of the squad for Paso Robles, it was announced this morning by William Benswanger, treasurer of the Corsairs. They are pitchers L. Vernon Kennedy and James Bivin and Outfielder Gus Dugas.

Kennedy was recalled from Hazleton, of the New York-Pennsylvania League; Dugas from Kansas City, of the American Association, and Bivin, from Wichita, of the Western League.

Judging from his showing at Kansas City, Dugas did not suffer any handicap as a result of a broken jaw received when he collided with Ben Sankey while working out at Forbes Field for the home opener. Dugas has been setting the American Association afire with his terrific batting. Latest figures show him to be hitting .429.

Racing Drivers Pay Tribute To Gleason

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP).—A group of racing drivers visited an undertaker's room here yesterday and laid wreaths on the coffin which held the body of Jimmy Gleason, killed Saturday when his car crashed into a concrete wall at the State Fair track.

Gleason's body has been sent to Philadelphia, where funeral services will be held in the Church of the Holy Child tomorrow morning.

D. O'LOUGHLIN, M'ELROY WIN

Dr. Dave O'Loughlin and Dr. W. S. McElroy won the men's doubles invitation tourney at the Allegheny Country Club yesterday, defeating Walter Krensberg and William O'Loughlin, 6-3, 6-1 and 6-3, in the final.

Consolation honors went to Frank White and Frank McClintock, who defeated Graham McCargo and Robert Applegate, 8-6, 6-2.

CHARLESTON M.-A. VICTOR

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Charleston's Senators, in the final game of the season, yesterday clinched the second-half pennant in the Middle-Atlantic League, after a spectacular climb from fifth place during the last week. They beat Beaver Falls, 5 to 1.

The Senators battle Cumberland, Md., first-half winner, for the championship.

Watt B. Powell, manager of the Charleston club, said after the game that series dates as tentatively decided upon provided for the opening of the series in Cumberland on Wednesday, followed by a second game there on Thursday, games in Charleston on Saturday and Sunday. Locations for additional games, he said, will be chosen later.

In yesterday's closing games, Fairmont nosed out Clarksburg, 2-1; Johnstown tripped Huntington, 8-6; Scottdale topped Beckley, 6-5, and Cumberland outswatted Youngstown, 16-11.

HUNTINGTON STAND RAZED

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—The grandstand at League Park, home field of the Huntington Middle Atlantic League team, was destroyed by fire early today.

John Stewart, manager of the Huntington team, estimated the damage at $15,000 and said that only $2,500 insurance was carried on the wooden stands. He said it had not been decided when rebuilding of the stands would be started. Morris Harvey College at Barboursville, had planned to play all of its home football games at League Park this season.

EDGEWOOD NINE COPS AGAIN

CLEVELAND, Sept. 14.—The Pittsburgh Edgewoods, participating in the National Baseball Federation tournament here, had a close shave in the second-round game yesterday, but stayed in the first division along with outfits from Cleveland, Scranton, Flint and Cincinnati by nosing out the Indianapolis nine, 4 to 3.

The Edgewoods oppose the Flint (Mich.) nine today in a third-round game. Flint defeated Painesville, O., 15 to 4, yesterday. The score:

Sam Hall, Veteran Scribe, Succumbs

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Sam P. Hall, noted sports writer, died at Chicago Hospital today. He was 48 years old.

Hall underwent an operation for hernia a week ago.

He was widely known for his activities in the boxing world, which he turned to as a publicity man after a successful career in the newspaper world. He formerly was sports editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, and worked on the Los Angeles Examiner and the New York American, all Hearst newspapers. He was born at La Salle, Ill.

Hall was in charge of newspaper arrangements at Max Schmeling's training camp at Conneaut Lake, Pa., when the champion was preparing for his recent bout with Young Stribling at Cleveland.

Winn Auto Victor; Two Pilots Injured

WOODBRIDGE, N. J., Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Billy Winn, Atlanta automobile racing pilot, won the 20-mile feature at the Woodbridge Speedway yesterday in a racing program marred by two accidents.

Both accidents occurred at the same spot, when racing cars plunged through a guard rail into the mechanics pit. The drivers, Harold Larsaler, of Overbrook, Pa., and Bert Karnatz, of Detroit, escaped injury, although their cars were wrecked.

ST. FRANCIS GRIDDERS PLENTIFUL, LIGHT

VETERANS FACE STIFF FIGHTS FOR BERTHS

(This is the sixth of an annual series of special articles, written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of tri-state district college elevens. The prospects of W. & J. will be reviewed in Wednesday's issue.)

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

LORETTO, Pa., Sept. 14.—St. Francis College, tucked away in the foothills of the Alleghenies, expects to continue its advance in intercollegiate football this fall with a light, fast and well-drilled eleven, playing through a wisely chosen and comparatively tough schedule.

The Red Flash squad, again under the tutelage of Gene Stringer and Jerry Ingoldsby, consists of 11 lettermen, some dozen holdovers from '30 and '29 and a very promising contingent of freshmen. The season opens September 25 with Geneva and closes November 14 with Catholic University, with Canisius, St. Thomas, Slippery Rock, Davis-Elkins, the United States Coast Guard and St. Vincent listed for the interim.

Coach Stringer, a former John Carroll University star, has five veteran backs and six experienced linemen with which to work. The class of his freshmen, however, is such that not a single letterman, unless it be big Tom Valunas, at tackle, is sure of retaining his job. Such a situation, provided the frosh hold up, is much to be desired.

LINE NOT HEAVY

The line is not to be extremely heavy, even for the Red Flashes. Johnny Keats, an "S" winner of 1930, is leading the parade of terminal candidates. He may be paired with Borzella or Bradley, or Cipriano, Gubane, Houk, who was at Penn State last year; McElligant, Harland, Mooney, Swank, Tumbas, Veil or Rokoski. The smoke of battle for the terminal jobs hasn't begun to lift as yet, and Coach Stringer is having some difficulty in sorting out his candidates.

Valunas and Jurasko have the inside track in the race for the tackle jobs, but are being hard pressed by Johnny Poos, Frethy, Chervenak, Johnston, Malviseis and Ivary. None of the prospects are as heavy as the coaches would like and the jobs demand. If Valunas and Jurasko can hold up and avoid injury, the situation will be at ease, but replacement strength may fall a bit short.

Leap and Jack White, a set of veterans, are premier guard choices. White tips the scales at 180 and Leap at 185. Andolina, from Braddock, is a likely looking lad, with 190 pounds of hefty. Brinkley, Brookman, Butler, A. Mooney, Monick and Vidmar are having their hands full in easing Leap and White out of the varsity berths.

MANY CENTER CANDIDATES

Stringer has more center hopefuls than there are lies in a barber shop. He has Dick Brewer, a letterman; Ray Jones, Art Lammi and Bill Blazek battling tooth and nail for the job. Jack White reported as a center this year, to make matters more complex, but was soon converted into a guard. Brewer, topping the others in experience, may land the starting job.

No less than 16 halfbacks are candidates for the varsity jobs. Herb Wagner, letter man; Red Velvick, a nicely put together freshman; Mel Larsen, Reducca, who can go either at quarter or half, and is about certain to be one or the other, and Brubaker are the leaders. Brubaker and Velvick appear to be the first choice, provided Reducca is used at quarterback.

However, Coach Stringer is counting heavily on using young George Gates, of Windber, at quarter, thus releasing Reducca for duty as a halfback. Gates passes and kicks well, and has shown rare ability as a ball carrier and general offensive threat. Tom Radigan, of Cleveland, is another signal barker prospect.

The fullback will be selected from among Art White, a letter man of two years back, Fred Fagan, another letter-winner; Jim Casey, who also sports his monogram, and Marty Egan. White and Fagan both are crackerjack plungers and strong defensive performers.

GOOD PUNTER LACKING

As is the case at most schools this year, consistent punters are lacking. Stringer is working with three or four men, but so far is undecided just which ones he should concentrate on. He has a flock of good passers, led by White and Gates.

With his big squad and the way in which his lettermen are distributed, the young mentor is able to place experience alongside of inexperience. His backfield, even if it does not click offensively, promises alert and capable defensive strength and his line, while not as heavy as it might or should be, will be tough and it is being well drilled.

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The Cards aren't yet sure of winning the pennant, but that Cincinnati club has already mathematically clinched last place. And the season's last crucial series is now going on between the Red and White Sox, to see who gets the cellar.

Nick Altrock

If the White Sox could be spurred into a big losing streak, they might edge out the Boston club, but the final standing never would look natural without the Red Sox holding lilies in their hand.

Despite you could practically buy a seat on the New York Stock Exchange for the price of a World Series ticket, they've got extra mail trucks working in Philadelphia just delivering applications. If there's a depression going on, Philadelphia evidently hasn't got wind of it yet.

PITT GRIDDERS TAKE REST

CAMP HAMILTON, Windber, Pa., Sept. 14.—Football was present only in discussions at the Panther camp yesterday. In the morning the members of the Catholic faith were taken to mass at Windber, while W. W. Mendenhall, executive secretary of the University of Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A., led services at camp. The remainder of the day was taken up by receiving visitors and enjoying a complete rest.

This morning brought the Panthers back to football and hard work. Two sessions are slated each day this week, with a scrimmage in the afternoon following the morning drill. Saturday will be the final day in this mountain retreat.

Swissvale Legion Team to Be Feted

Members of the Swissvale American Legion junior baseball team, who won the state title in the annual national Legion junior baseball championship, recently concluded, will be feted at a banquet to be held in the Swissvale Methodist Church at 6:30 Thursday evening.

BEN BARRETT IN HOSPITAL

Ben Barrett, the Dukes' most eligible center, now being in Mercy Hospital with acute tonsilitis, the outlook has not improved any on the Bluff as the last four days of training begin in preparation for Friday's season opener with Geneva College under the new Forbes Field floodlights. Barrett was taken ill late Saturday night.

Coach Elmer Layden's second choice for the snapper-back job doubtless will be Jim Riley, who has improved greatly in this season's practice. He is a junior, as is Glenn Thomas, another center who failed to make the varsity squad last season, but who is back this year determined to make good. A third man also is seeking the pivot post, Ben Ciccone, of New Castle, sophomore.

Today, the Night Riders will go through some final heavy drills and will wind up the tough work tomorrow. Wednesday and Thursday will be devoted to polishing up the rough spots in attack and defense, while Friday will be given over to a rest. Friday night, the Dukes march out for the first time in 1931 and open the college season in Western Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh against Geneva at Forbes Field.

Between Rounds

Indications are that Jimmy Braddock, of Jersey City, will be George Parker's opponent in the main bout of the final show of the season at the Meyers Bowl one week from tonight.

Jack O'Brien (not the former boxer) has received a license to promote boxing shows at St. Mary's, Pa., and expects to stage his first show early next month.

Sammy Faris, local bantamweight, has won his first two bouts since Buck Crawford and is booked to box there again next Thursday night.

Andy Martin, of Boston, who boxes Flashy Bolafral, of Erie, in the windup at Hickey Park, Wyvale, Thursday night, is booked Johnny Diglio, Jackie Rodgers, Midget Mike O'Dowd, Johnny Dundo and Johnny Farr in local arenas. In his most recent starts he has been in against Baltimore Battalion, the featherweight champion, and Matty White.

Matchmaker Jules Beck expects to announce his complete card some time today for his Tiger West-Paul Pirrone show at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Wednesday night. He has Jimmy Kelly and Marty Simmons in the second bout and Tiger Joe Clark and Jimmy Kelly in the opener.

Steve Smith and Sammy Burns box the second bout at Hickey Park, Thursday night. Beau McArthur and Eddie Hebner are in the semi-fist.

A's Need Three More Wins to Clinch Flag

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—(INS.)—Three more victories in their 15 remaining games is the easy task facing the Athletics today in order to clinch their third straight American League pennant. With three victories the A's would remain a full game ahead of the Washington Senators, even if Walter Johnson's team won their remaining 15 games.

J. O'LOUGHLIN TOPS BROIDA

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 14.—Dr. John O'Loughlin, of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, shone brilliantly here yesterday to down Frank Broida, Harvard southpaw, and thereby to annex the men's singles honors of the first annual Greensburg Country Club invitation tennis tourney.

Broida, twice winner of Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh public parks man-to-man laurels, battled his more experienced rival right courageously, but lacked the sustained power to overcome an O'Loughlin attack that appeared to have recovered quite nicely from its Morgantown lapse of a week ago. The Winged Head easily vanquished his opponent, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Sam Cohn and Aubre Smith, Beckley (W. Va.) duo, romped off with the men's doubles trophies at the expense of John Brown, Mount Lebanon contender, and Billy Ramsay, Uniontown Lafayette satellite, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3.

In the mixed doubles, Miss Carson and Tack Hammer landed a hard-won decision over Catharine Cole, Greensburg, and John O'Loughlin, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

BLUE SUNOCO
THE ONLY TRUE BLUE

ALLEN H. BLAISDELL
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR
CARNEGIE INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

SCHENLEY PARK
PITTSBURGH, PA.
July 8, 1931

Sun Oil Company,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen:

The purpose of the economy test recently completed by me was to determine if Blue Sunoco, which sells at regular gas price, actually delivered as many miles per gallon as the better nationally known premium-priced fuels which sell at 3 cents more per gallon.

I found that the consumption of Blue Sunoco was less than that of any of the other fuels tested - which means more miles per gallon on the road.

Brake Horse Power	GASOLINE used	A	B	C	D	BLUE SUNOCO	F	G	H
17	gals. per hour	2.217	2.246	2.220	2.280	2.115	2.195	2.288	2.302
25	gals. per hour	2.845	2.727	2.725	2.800	2.617	2.725	2.677	2.742

Its economy is even more apparent since Blue Sunoco sells for 3 cents less per gallon than the other fuels.

Very truly yours,

A. H. Blaisdell

On the other hand it is not necessary to buy premium priced gasoline to bring out the best that's in your car.

The Sun Oil Company makes but one motor fuel—the premium performing Blue Sunoco whose quality has been boosted again and again . . . yet it sells at regular gas price.

FOULIS LEADS IN PRO GOLF

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 14 (AP).—Jim Foulis of Chicago [illegible] gained the early lead in the P. G. A. championship by shooting a 71, one over par on the first qualifying trip over the Wannamoisett course. Foulis performance was a stroke better than his next rival, Pat Cirelli of New Rochelle, N. which falls upon the defensive fullback, but there seems no other way out at Pitt this year.

STRONG IN RESERVES

Pitt also seems well blessed with reserves. For ends there are Skladany, Daley and Timmons. At tackles are Meredith and Valenti, who is big enough to hold up one side but lacks speed. Morris and Milligan will be understudied by Onder and Hartwig and Tormey, unless all signs fail, will keep Daugherty on his toes. Alpert and Cutri are reserve quarterbacks. Both have had experience and should prove valuable before the end of the season. Brown and Sebastian are fine-looking halfbacks, and both is slated for the reserve fullback job. Sebastian in particular is capable of great things.

The Pitt schedule is a brute one. The best efforts of both coaches and players will be necessary to maintain the high standard that Jock Sutherland has set for Panther elevens in the past.

LOCAL SCHOOL STARS LOST FOR SEASON

By JULIUS LEVIN

Duquesne High School and Swissvale High School football prospects took a decided drop today when it was learned that both teams will be deprived of their most consistent performers for the season.

Mike Ranakovich, star halfback at Duquesne last season and heralded as the main cog in this year's grid machine, is lost to the team for the season because of illness. Ross Emrick, who starred in basketball and football at Swissvale last year, is out for the season with a broken arm suffered in scrimmage. He is a halfback.

SCOTT HIGH DRILLS

While the City League coaches are devoting all of their attention towards whipping their athletes into first-class condition for the official battles on Friday, September 25, Johnny Reed, popular mentor at Scott High, North Braddock, is putting the finishing touches on his grid machine for the opener with Scottdale at North Braddock next Thursday night.

His 1930 eleven ruined by graduation, Coach Reed will be forced to send a somewhat makeshift lineup against Scottdale in the opening night battle of the season. The contest originally was scheduled for Friday night, but was moved up to avoid a conflict with Duquesne University's opener with Geneva at Forbes Field.

Coach Reed will be compelled to use several untried players against Scottdale in the opener and it will be interesting to watch how they show up in their first real engagement. Scottdale is said to have a strong eleven that should prove a real test for Reed's gridders.

FULL CARD ON TAP

While the Scott-Scottdale game is the only scholastic contest carded in this vicinity this week, Fayette County schools face a full schedule of games next Friday and Saturday.

Friday's games include: Fairchance-Carmichaels at Carmichaels; Germania Township-Masontown; All-Saints at Masontown; Point Marion-South Brownsville at Point Marion; Perry Township-Dunbar Borough at Perry Township; Brownsville-Centerville at Brownsville; Fayette City-Morris Township at Fayette City; Perryopolis-Dunbar Township at Perryopolis; and Belle-vernon-Monessen at Belle-vernon.

Birmingham Plays Houston in Series

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 14 (AP).—Winners of their third Southern Association championship in the last four years, the Birmingham Barons came home last night to prepare for the invasion, Wednesday, of Houston, winner of the Texas League, for the first game of the 1931 Dixie series.

The veteran Ray Caldwell is slated to hurl the opening game against the Buffs, while the Texas champions will open behind Dizzy Dean.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Jem Smith, who died in London a few days ago at the age of 68, was one of the best of the bare knuckle heavyweight fighters of his era and fought one of the most memorable clashes for the world championship. . . . His was an interesting history. . . . Born in the Red Lion Market, White Cross street, St. Luke's, London, January 21, 1863, he acquired a liking for boxing while employed in the London timber yards. . . . He was of stocky build, standing only 5 feet 8½ inches, as his picture, which appears herewith, shows. . . . His first success was attained in a competition at the Griffin, Shoreditch. . . . Later he beat one Showey of Holloway, and then Harry Arnold, in a bout for a purse of $50.

Jem Smith

Following a series of other conquests for what today would be insignificant purses, Smith met Alf Greenfield for $1,500 a side and the English championship at the Maisons Lafitte, near Paris, on February 17, 1886. The ropes were cut in the seventeenth round and the crowd broke in and ended the fight in which Smith was leading. . . . On December 18, 1887, Smith fought Jake Kilrain on the Island of St. Pierre, France, for the championship of the world and $5,000 a side. They battled 106 rounds, under London prize ring rules, before darkness ended the contest after two and one-half hours of fighting, a draw being agreed upon. . . . On November 11, 1889, Jem fought the great Peter Jackson at the Pelican Club in London, Jackson winning on a foul in the second round.

Smith's last appearance in the ring was against Frank Slavin, at Bruges, Belgium, in December, 1889. . . . They fought 14 rounds, in which Slavin had the edge, but the referee through fear declared the match a draw. . . . Frank's friends contended he did not receive fair play and public opinion acclaimed him the winner. . . . Smith thought it best to retire permanently from the ring following this bout. . . . He has gone down in history as one of the greatest of the bare knuckle fighters. . . . He was champion of England twice. . . . Fame is fleeting, however, and it is not surprising that his passing was dismissed with a few paragraphs in the news reports of the day.

Our new national tennis champion is more like clinging Vines than a thorn in the sides of the other court stars. . . . Benny McArthur, McKeesport lightweight boxer, has matriculated at West Virginia University and will fight his way through college. . . . His manager, Bernard Kelly, Jr., of McKeesport, by the way, has been named matchmaker of the Morgantown A. C., boxing club. . . . Benny's going to study journalism, of all things! . . . Ted (Kid) Lewis, former welterweight champion, is campaigning for a seat in the English Parliament. . . . Al McBride and Jimmy Conrad, pro and caddiemaster, respectively, are receiving donations of clothing and other materials for the poor at a shelter house at the South Park public golf course. . . . Distribution is made through the large army of caddies. . . . Tad Jones, former Yale coach, who showed up here the other day with a bad ankle, had that member broken in a boxing bout with his son, Tad, Jr., who must be some shucks with the gloves. . . . Tad, Jr., hit the old gent on the whiskers so hard he fractured his ankle. . . . At least that's the story they're telling of how it happened.—HARRY KECK.

LEAGUE GRID TEAMS HOLD WORKOUTS

By TOM BIRKS

Under a blazing sun practically all of the teams in the Western Pennsylvania Independent Football Conference held long workouts yesterday. Many of the coaches drilled their charges late in the afternoon. Next Sunday all of the clubs are arranging independent games to put on the finishing touches for the openers a week later.

The McKeesport Bears, Bull Boyer and Socks Reed, held a strenuous workout last Thursday evening under the lights and with another workout scheduled Thursday and a game with Ellwood City slated for Sunday at Olympia Park, there is reason to feel that the Tube City entrant will be more advanced than any of the other clubs.

Paul Muzzio and Whitey Dummer had a horde of players out at West View yesterday afternoon. Dummer is in sole charge of whipping the line into shape. Muzzio is reticent regarding the makeup of his club.

Of the new men, Kovalcheck, Duquesne's former plunging fullback seems to be outstanding. He is going to give Mose Kelsh quite a run for the all-star fullback honors.

There is a chance the terms of John Karcis, Carnegie Tech's plunging fullback, may be met by one of the managers. Linwood was keenly interested in signing him if they were voted into the Conference and still insists it will have one of the best clubs in the district.

If Karcis plays he probably will go with Art Rooney's Majestics. Rooney again will be the last manager in the Conference to get his outfit under way.

East Pittsburgh had a fine workout. Hurley had 35 men trying for berths. The Firemen insist they are going to have a winner at any cost.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MEETS

Representatives of lightweight grid teams who are interested in the organization of a junior football league will meet at Spalding's at 8 o'clock tonight. Prospective members of the new organization are Glendale Tigers, Etna Sycamores, J. J. Verona, Beltzhoover Scholastics, Westinghouse Alumni, Millvale Amici, Allison Park, Oakland Community, Armstrong Bulldogs, Pleasant Valley, Springdale, Amicus, Kenmawr, Fredericks, St. Rosalia and Rox Rangers.

Orioles Purchase Packard, Local Boy

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 14.—The local club of the Sally League has announced the sale of Frank Packard, of Pittsburgh, to the Baltimore Orioles, of the International League.

Packard has had a big year with Charlotte, leading the league in runs batted in with 119, in home runs with 21 and in triples with 17. He has hit 30 doubles and has stolen 30 bases.

Forbes

Washington Acting More Aggressively

By B. C. FORBES

TWO IMPORTANT forces are at work.

Briefly, President Hoover, Gov. Meyer of the Federal Reserve Board and other governmental leaders interested in finance have become extremely active in bringing influence to bear upon bankers to bestir themselves to take constructive steps to overcome or modify conditions which are retarding recovery.

B. C. Forbes

In higher banking, investment, industrial and railway circles a feeling prevails that until contemplated wage readjustments are effected, especially in industry and transportation, no really effective headway, no lasting recovery is likely.

Briefly, the administration is no longer satisfied to remain inactive.

Our financial and other men of very large affairs adhere to their attitude, "things must be allowed to run their course."

UNDER THESE circumstances it is impossible to form any worthwhile opinion as to what is likely to happen in the near future.

Those who keep vigilantly in touch with what occurs on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange declare unqualifiedly that so far there has been no evidence that the most powerful financial interests are exerting themselves to turn the security markets upward.

THIS WEEK should bring additional manifestation of the aggressive efforts of Washington to spur bankers into helpful action. President Hoover's conference with powerful bankers, plus his interest in cotton financing, reflects his increased determination to use all the influence of his high office to stimulate broad gauge action.

From Washington came last week another reassuring statement. The Controller of the Currency announced that "elasticity" would be permitted in appraising the value of bonds carried by national banks throughout the country.

Had a narrow, short-sighted, finicky course been announced, the effect would have been disturbing in many places. The fact is that there has already been a deplorable amount of hoarding.

THE SOONER the whole wage question is settled, the quicker genuine recovery is likely to develop. So long as uneasiness continues on this score, hesitancy and doubt and timidity will be logical.

That unemployment distress will be capably met now seems most probable.

WHAT IS NEEDED now more than anything else is dissipation of fear. Fear is paralyzing action from bottom to top of our social and financial structure.

A very large section of the American people is talking and acting as if the nation were headed for collapse.

This attitude is condemnable most condemnable among those who should know better.

The indisputable truth is that, regardless of what may or may not happen in the way of temporary fluctuations, almost everything is now extraordinarily cheap—cotton, wheat, copper, rubber, oil, building and other materials, also most stocks and many bonds.

What opportunities are going a-begging at this moment!

STOCK MARKET HOVERS NEAR JUNE LOWS

Steel Sells Off More Than 2 Points to Another 10-Year Bottom; A. T. & T. Off 5

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP.)—Wall street came back to work prepared for a blue Monday today, and its expectations were not disappointed.

The share market opened with a heavy flurry of selling orders accumulated over the week end and while pressure lightened after the first hour the market continued under the weight of a large list of issues with few offsetting features. Heaviest of the day's selling was concentrated in the Dow, Jones & Young list, but the market continued to display a generally weak tone throughout the day.

The market sank to the lowest levels below [illegible] recorded since June 2. A number of miscellaneous industrials contributed to the outstanding weak spots. Coppers were rather heavy, and American Telephone lost about 5 points finally penetrating its June low. United States Steel sold off more than 2 points to another 10-year bottom.

The news of the week-end provided little in the way of corporate or trade news to influence the markets. A somewhat better rate of steel output than expected was reported at the start of the new week for the Youngstown area, but some observers were inclined to be rather skeptical as to whether the improvement could be sustained in view of the extremely deliberate rate of progress in preparing introduction of the new automobile models.

Divergent influences continued to hang over the market with the postponement of Baltimore and Ohio meeting until the end of the month, and the statement by President Storey of the Santa Fe that he would not discuss dividend possibilities in a year like this.

COTTON OPENS AT DECLINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Cotton opened steady today at a decline of 4 to 6 points under selling promoted by a favorable view of the weather reports, indifferent Liverpool cables and weakness in the stock market. December sold off to 6.73 cents and March to 7.03 cents during the early trading, or about 7 to 9 points net lower.

Offerings were taken by trade buying or covering at the decline and the market held fairly steady at the end of the first half hour.

The standard cloth statistics showing a decrease of 6.8 per cent in stocks on hand for August with a decrease of 21.6 per cent unfilled orders had no appreciable effect on the market. The report of Census Bureau on domestic consumption was about in line with expectation. It placed the amount of cotton consumed in this country during August at 425,819 bales against 540,518 for July and 352,335 for August last year. The market was quiet after the early selling and prices held generally steady. December sold up from 6.73 per cent to 6.79 and March from 7.03 to 7.08 and the market was about 1 to 3 points net lower at mid-day.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 14.—Cotton spot quiet; price unchanged to 5 points lower. New Plan for Fixed Trust Investments Developed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

A NEW VARIATION OF THE FIXED Investment trust idea has been developing during the past year. The plan provides for a definite investment program usually covering a period of 10 years and has the new feature of life insurance to complete the program in the event of death before the end of the period.

The arrangement appears to have merit but, like the early fixed trusts, some of the plans are in need of further refinement. Sales literature in some cases is misleading to the investor. The cost, particularly in the initial year, is high and this burden is sometimes increased by tieing up the plan with the wrong type of fixed trust.

Under arrangements of this type the investor agrees to purchase a certificate ranging in value from $1,000 to $10,000. He can pay for this in installments spread over a 10-year period. Out of the installments a special trustee pays for group life insurance to cover the unfinished portion of the payments, deducts a fee to cover expenses and profits, and invests the balance in the shares of a specified fixed investment trust. All the income from the fixed trust is reinvested in additional shares so that the investment increases on the equivalent of a compound interest arrangement.

Proceeds Distributed

AT THE EXPIRATION of the agreement the purchased fixed trusts shares are given to the investor. In the case of death the insurance proceeds are used to buy additional shares and the entire investment is turned over to the beneficiary.

The investor has the option of discontinuing the arrangement at any time and drawing out the trust shares which have been purchased.

The plan has the merit of permitting an investor of modest means to secure diversification through investment in a large number of representative corporations while he is making small monthly or annual payments. It has the further advantage of insuring the completion of the program.

Cost Is High

THE SALES LITERATURE does not make the fact clear that the cost is rather high. There are expenses to the operation of the investment-insurance plan and also there is a load charged with the purchase of the fixed trust shares. In one plan only about half the funds are invested in fixed trust shares in the first year. This load decreases in subsequent years and may be justified by the insurance and other services provided.

On the balance remaining to be invested, a charge of from 8 to 10 per cent is made for the services in issuing the fixed trust shares. An additional load is applied on the earnings of the fixed trust when they are reinvested in new fixed trust shares. If the fixed trust has a reserve fund, this portion of the investment is not working and is not performing any needed service.

Investment arrangements of this type have a distinctly speculative flavor. This is not necessarily an unfavorable criticism if the investor knows that he is buying a speculation with its attendant advantages and disadvantages. But one circular has the boldness to declare that the plan is not speculative.

Fixed investment trust shares represent a co-operative interest in a list of common stocks of leading corporations. The value of these stocks fluctuates widely in line with stock market conditions.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Fanchon went on doggedly, steadily. She was swaying a little. The solid wood and metal of the great modern desk was some support. She leaned against it gratefully. She told of holding Evelyn's handbag before the crash. Of how, afterwards, she bound her arm with Evelyn's handkerchief. Of her belief that Evelyn had died. Of her frantic escape toward help and freedom. Of the men whom she met and her lapse into unconsciousness. Of the name on the handkerchief, the name by which the strangers called her, and of her dangerous resolve.

She told them of what the doctor had said: that Evelyn could not live; and how therefore, in her mad and desperate desire to bury the dead past, she had let them think Evelyn "Miss Smith." And of how, armed with Evelyn's name and credentials, she had come on to New York, meeting the reporters on the way and hearing her belief that the other girl was dead confirmed by them.

She told of how Tony had traced her, forced her to meet him, forced her to accept him. Of how she knew nothing of his plans. Of how, finally, he had told her what he had planned to do on the night of the Van Suydam ball. Of how she had appeared to agree and had herself made plans: had not put the drug in Collin's highball or in Mrs. Carstairs' hot milk. But had waited, listening for Tony, knowing he would be caught. Of how she had taken the revolver from Collin's study that afternoon and hidden it in her room. And put the jewels in the case so that the sound he would make in removing them would be heard.

Collin said suddenly:

"Why didn't you go through with it? There was little likelihood that if we continued to believe you—Evelyn—we would have hunted you and your companion down."

APPRECIATED KINDNESS

She said steadily:

"I'm not a thief. Oh, I stole Evelyn's name, of course, and her position, and her place in your affections. Yet, thinking her dead, I couldn't believe I had done her any great wrong, nor did I feel I would wrong you very much, either. . . . I was willing to serve you on my knees," she said directly to Jennie Carstairs, "because of the kindness, the love you showed me. And . . . I loved you," said Fanchon.

Jennie's eyes were wet; she indicated Tony, sitting there, impassive, his dark face shut as hard as a clenched fist, his eyes watchful.

"You didn't care for—him."

"No. I haven't," said Fanchon, "since . . . since I learned about him. He knows that."

"That can wait. Evelyn. What about Evelyn?"

Fanchon told them all she knew. All that Tony had said. About the possible brain operation. "I wanted to see her," she went on, "but he refused."

Collin turned to the other man. His mother was crying softly, in a sort of dull shock of horror and pity.

"Where is she?" Collin demanded. "I—we must go to her at once. Tonight. Bring her here. Have everything done that can be done for her. Everything."

Tony shrugged.

"I know the address," said Fanchon eagerly.

REFUSES TO TELL

Tony spoke, smiling:

"You will not find her there. I hold her as a hostage for my safe conduct. If you permit me to go I give you my word of honor—" Collin laughed aloud. Tony looked at him gravely and remarked: "Even among thieves, there is honor . . . my word of honor, that tomorrow you receive a communication from me telling you her present whereabouts."

Collin called him a brutal name, without apology to the listeners. Tony shrugged again. Collin rose, stood over him with the gun.

"Tell me at once—or—"

"No," said Tony, mildly, "you over-reach yourself, my friend. If you kill me I cannot speak. And alive, I will not speak, but until I have had your word also that I may go."

"I'm afraid," cried Fanchon suddenly, on a high hysterical note.

"Of what?" asked Collin. His voice was very gentle. Her heart turned over in her breast. Was he sorry for her? She didn't want—pity. "Of letting him go. It means you will never be safe! He may never tell us where Evelyn is! He may—blackmail you as well. You must," she said, "give him up to the police."

"If he does," Tony reminded her, "I will implicate you . . . and the Carstairs into the bargain, through you."

She turned a blanched face to Jennie.

"Oh," she said hopelessly, "what are we to do? For myself I don't mind. I almost welcome it. After these months of deceit and terror. Yes, I'm perfectly willing to pay," she said loudly, "but I can't bear to have you dragged through it. The sordidness—"

Jennie did not answer. She asked Fanchon a question instead.

"You say you did not see Evelyn at this address to which you went?"

"No."

"Did you ask to?"

"No. He asked me . . . if I wished to. I said at first . . . no. Then I realized what a coward I was. So I said, yes. But he had changed his mind. Later I asked him again. But he would not let me see her."

"You did not hear her, perhaps, when you went in the house?"

"No."

"And yet you were sure she was there? Perhaps she was not. Perhaps he had moved her. Perhaps—but it is best to begin at the beginning. You can recall the name of the doctor who cared for her—and you? And the town where you were?"

"Why, yes," Fanchon replied, wondering.

"Then give them to me. We will, as I have said, begin at the beginning."

Fanchon gave her the name and address. Tony's eyes were doubly watchful. Suddenly he wrenched wildly at his bonds.

"Oh no you don't!" said Collin.

"My wrists hurt," said Tony sullenly.

not his habit, but when the fit does take him he is tenacious and will chew the cud a long time. He cannot get the sergeant from Dresden out of his head.

In the villages the folk stare after us. At a railway crossing there are flowers in the watchman's window. Dogs bark at us. Wolf growls in return. We smoke vacantly.

Marching, marching. We have now reached the zone of field ambulance stations, of supply depots. A spacious park with plane trees. Stretchers and wounded under the trees. The leaves are falling and covering them in red and gold.

A gas hospital. Bad cases that cannot be moved. Blue faces, waxen green faces, dead eyes, eaten by the acid, wheezing, choking, dying men. They all want to get away; they are afraid of being taken prisoner. As if it were not a matter of indifference where they die.

We try to cheer them, telling them they will be better cared for with the Americans. But they do not listen. Again and again they call to us to take them with us.

The cries are terrible. The pallid faces seem so unreal in the light out here in the open. But most awful are the beards. They take on a life of their own, they stand out stiff, fantastical, growing luxuriantly over the sunken jaws, a black fungus that feeds and thrives the more these sag and waste away.

Some of the badly wounded reach out their thin, gray arms like children. "Take me with you, mate," they say, imploring. "Take me with you, mate." In the hollows of their eyes lurk already deep, strange shadows from which the pupils struggle up with difficulty, like drowning things. Others are quiet, following us as far as they can with their eyes.

The cries sound gradually fainter. The road drags on toilsomely. We are carrying a lot of stuff—a man must bring something back home with him. Clouds hang in the sky. During the afternoon the sun breaks through, and birch trees, now with only a few leaves left, hang mirrored in puddles of rain along the way. Soft blue haze is caught in the branches.

THE ROAD DRAGS ON

As I march on with pack and lowered head, by the side of the road I see an image of bright, silken trees reflected in the pools of rain. In these occasional mirrors they are displayed clearer than in reality. They get another light and in another way. Embedded there in the brown earth lies a span of sky, trees, depths and clearness. Suddenly I shiver. For the first time in many years I feel again that something is still beautiful, that this in all its simplicity is beautiful and pure, this image in the water pool before me—and in this thrill my heart leaps up. For a moment all that other falls away, and now for the first time I feel it. I see it. I comprehend it fully. Peace. The weight that nothing eased before, now lifts at last. Something strange, something new, flies up, a dove, a white dove. Trembling horizon, tremulous expectancy, first glimpse, presentiment, hope, exaltation, imminence. Peace.

Sudden panic and I look around. There behind me on the stretchers my comrades are now lying and still they call. It is peace, yet they must die. But I, I am trembling with joy and am not ashamed. And that is odd.

Because none can ever wholly feel what another suffers—is that the reason why wars perpetually recur?

DAILY SHORT STORY

'Mrs. What'sname'

Woman Thrilled as Society Leader Telephones

Algernon Kempson sat on the side porch of his pretty little suburban home.

He was quite comfortable in a steamer chair, a small stand at his side containing a jar of pipe tobacco, matches and a tall glass of pale amber liquid that would, if sipped, remind one of burning peat.

Mr. Kempson was placidly smoking a battered old pipe which he always lovingly described as being "sweet as a nut." He was reading the shipping news. There was an upward trend in shipping and since Mr. Kempson's business was that of shipping, being an official in a company owning a flock of world-girdling freighters, he was rather pleased.

A little buff and brown roadster came whirring up the fine bluestone driveway and entered the garage. Mr. Kempson glanced up and then resumed his reading.

The driver was Mrs. Kempson. She closed the garage doors with a slam and came up on the back porch with a frown darkening her still pretty forehead.

"Hello, Trixie," Mr. Kempson said, "how's things going?"

"Hello, Algy—things are simply awful."

"Tut-tut," he said and glanced back at his paper. He wanted to finish the article about the demand for cotton goods in China.

MARKS PLACE

Mrs. Trixana Kempson paused and stared at her husband.

"Is that all you can say?" she demanded.

"I said, 'Hello, dear,'" he answered, mildly, his finger on the place in the paper where he was reading.

"You said 'Tut-tut' when I told you things were simply hellish—is that nice?"

"You exasperate me so, Algy! I mean, was 'Tut-tut' very eloquent with sympathy? Is 'Tut-tut' all you can say when everything I planned is going to smash and that odious Mrs. Raleigh is likely to get all the glory and get taken up by the Wellingtons and be right in society and me left out?"

"Whew! What a mouthful, my dear—"

"Algernon!"

"I agree," he added hastily. "'Tut-tut' was hardly adequate. You know, my dear, I sailed as second officer for some years just to learn that end of our business and I picked up quite a vocabulary. If you demand it, I will curse for you—I will curse with resonant, euphonious and sulphuric maritime curses that will burn your pretty ears to a crisp. Which reminds me, our line is signing up to do a tremendous business right away."

"Don't talk shop, Algy."

"Shipping is scarcely shop—"

"You might take some interest in all of my affairs."

"I do. Oh, I do, my dear Trixie. I assure you," Mr. Kempson said, hastily and with a forced eagerness that was all too apparent, "I'm submerged with interest in your dance."

TO HOLD BAZAAR

"Dance? Dance! It's a bazaar, Algy—how many times must I tell you? A five-day bazaar to raise money to lift the mortgage from our country club and extend the course from nine to 18 holes."

"Who?"

"Why—uh—er—" he waved his hand in a gesture that took in all points of the compass. "Why—er—What'sname — you know."

"But I don't know. How should I know who called? How can I tell when you say 'What'sname?' What did he want?"

"He, who?"

Mr. Kempson had glanced back at his newspaper. He looked up seemingly rather dazed.

"Why? Why this What'sname person. What did he want?"

"Oh—er—not a he—some woman."

"Listen, Algernon Kempson, "you have a few good points, I admit, but you have some terrific faults. You never remember names. All you can think of is 'Whosis' or 'Soandso' or 'What'sname'—now do come down to earth and tell me who it was that called. You have enough fragment of brain left to recall that it was a woman. What did she want?"

"To see you."

"Think hard, Algy, who—now who wanted to see me?"

"Who? Why—er—you know—" he made another gesture that gave no exact direction. "What'sname."

"Er—Algy, dear—who did you say called to see me this afternoon?"

"Yes, dear," her husband murmured.

Mrs. Kempson clenched her little hands into fists, but managed to retain her poise for the moment.

"Someone called, you said—who was it, Algy?"

He looked up from his paper at her, rather blankly.

"What? Oh, yes, yes—er—What'sname called?"

"Well, what was her name?"

"Er—oh, you know her, the name's slipped me—Mrs.—er—oh, you know, What'sname."

Mrs. Kempson held herself down. She asked, with forced calmness and an attempt at being sweet and patient, "Are you sure it wasn't Mrs. So-and-so or Mrs. Whosis, or Mrs. Such-and-Such?"

"Eh?"

"What I am trying to get at, Algernon Kempson, is the name of the woman you said called this afternoon."

"Quite so—name's slipped me, can't remember names, damn nuisance, pardon me, but it doesn't matter much, does it?"

"Probably not, Algy—the chances are one against a hundred that it was some woman with an impossible daughter, and she wanted to have her sing or dance or recite at our grand concert."

"U-m-m-m," murmured Mr. Kempson, drawing at his pipe and glancing back at his paper.

"Was it?" Mrs. Kempson demanded so sharply that her husband let his paper lay across his knees for a moment.

"What is what, my dear? Try and be specific!"

"Was the woman the Mrs. What'sname you mentioned, calling to get me to put her or her daughter into our grand concert?"

"Oh. I see. The caller didn't say—she didn't leave any message, she said she would get in touch with you or you were to get in touch with her—something like that."

SEEKS WOMAN'S NAME

"Something like that, eh? Either she will call again or I am to call her. How can I call her? There's no Mrs. What'sname in the telephone book."

"Probably not—quite a number of people have no telephones, perhaps she isn't in the book. Too bad, you'll have to go and see her if you cannot telephone to her."

"The lady who was here, dear."

"Oh, well, she may call and she may not. It may have been someone important to me right now or it may have been some woman with something to sell or some fool suggestions to make. Trouble is, Algy, I'm frantic, absolutely frantic."

"Now, now—don't say that. You may be a little nervous, but far from frantic."

"Listen, Algy—they made me head of this—chairman of the management committee. That odious Mrs. Raleigh wanted to be appointed. She's a jealous cat. She's dying to cut a big splurge, she wants to be taken up by the Wellingstons, and so do I, for that matter, then I would be among the social elect here. Now, everything I've done so far hasn't been half enough. I can't seem to get talent for our last night concert—they want celebrities and they expect me to get them and I just can't. I might, if I had eight or ten thousand to spend for big talent; soloists, vocal and instrumental, some notable figure in fiction to give a humorous lecture, celebrities who get from five hundred to five times that a night. If I could get them to come gratis I'd be made. They'd mingle with our club members at the costume ball afterwards—it would make me. I have all of these details to attend to—"

Mrs. Kempson paused for breath.

"I see," Mr. Kempson said, "and that's nice."

"What is nice?"

"The success you are having getting ready for the big shindig."

"Bazaar, Algy, bazaar—a five-day bazaar, with sales, pictures, dances, prizes, a sort of ballyhoo avenue of freaks and things for sale, to end with a big concert by celebrities—and you call it a shindig."

"Bazaar, yes, that's it—you mentioned it the other day."

"Mentioned it? I've talked of nothing else for weeks, Algy. I know you are a smart business man, smart in shipping circles now don't be so dumb in other things. I need your help and advice. I'll explain again—if I flop with this I'll never get anywhere, socially. If I make it a huge success Mrs. Fortescue Wellington will attend and she will become friendly with me and take me into her social circle. I'll be made. If I flop, that odious Mrs. Raleigh will gloat over me and likely as not get taken up by Mrs. Fortescue Wellington, herself!"

"Yes, yes, I see."

"And you tell me What's name called and that is all you know."

"Oh yes, yes, to be sure—" Mr. Kempson fished in one of his pockets. "I remember now, this Mrs. What'sname who called was Mrs. Fortescue Wellington."

"Really? Honestly?"

FORGETS NAME

"Yes, she said that you were the first person here who ever showed brains and initiative and that you were to telephone her. She wants you to put her on your committee, she said she could get—uh huh—here—"

He found the card and handed to his wife.

She glanced at it and rushed to the telephone. Mrs. Wellington was calling her "my dear" and promising to pay for the big talent. Mrs. Kempson was in blissful raptures over it.

Nita Kempson, their 18-year-old daughter, came home at this time.

"Hello, Dad, where's mother?" she asked.

"She's telephoning."

"Oh—uh—Mrs. What'sname."

Our gayest debs, our maddest matrons, all are playing the new game "Whirling Parchesi," as illustrated above. The rules are simple—the man spins his partner around several hundred times until she is dizzy and stunned. If she guesses where he is without reading the postmark she probably has a friend in the postal department, and cheated anyway.

The Campaign Issues

Voters Have Opportunity to Rebuke the Machine, Stop Extravagance, and Curb Racketeering

The primary campaign ends with the election tomorrow. The polls will be open from eight o'clock in the morning until eight o'clock in the evening, daylight saving time. If you are eligible, it is your civic duty to vote, and your moral duty to vote right.

The paramount issue is this: Are public officials to be chosen who can be relied upon to keep faith with the people, to abide by their oaths of office and perform their duties conscientiously, or are the jobs to be given to gang politicians of the corrupt Republican machine, who will use them to plunder the people, to advance their own selfish interests and to protect criminal racketeers?

It is but natural that the citizens, oppressed by a heavy tax burden, should be most interested in relieving themselves of a part of the load.

Protection from criminals is, however, of superior importance.

Happily it is possible to kill both birds with one stone: for the candidates who offer the greatest hope of putting an end to graft and waste and extravagance are also those who can be most confidently depended on to crush crime.

In Pittsburgh's councilmanic contest we have two outstanding tickets, one backed by Mayor Charles H. Kline and the other opposed to Kline and his policies.

Let us see what Kline's policies are. He stands, first, for the "spoils system." In utter disregard of the civil service reform law he has discharged policemen and other city employes for no other reason than because they did not engage in political work on his behalf, and has given their jobs to his ward heelers.

Kline has debauched the police force until it has become utterly unreliable for the enforcement of the law against criminal racketeers and election crooks. That is why state troopers were sent to Pittsburgh on the three registration days.

Kline's police court magistrates have virtually licensed bootleggers, professional gamblers and operators of commercial vice resorts by letting them off with light fines, on the rare occasions when they are arrested, instead of holding them for the grand jury as the law requires.

Under Kline's administration municipal expenditures have increased from $20,000,000 to $29,000,000 a year, notwithstanding that the cost of living has decreased. He has increased wages and salaries from $9,000,000 to $13,000,000 a year, and has squandered thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money on oil paintings and rugs for his office, a personal monogram and custom-built tires for his automobile.

In distegard of the law which requires that contracts shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidders he has given contracts to favored high bidders—a practice which has resulted in his being indicted, along with his former director of supplies, Bertram L. Succop, on a charge of malfeasance.

In consequence of these policies the city tax rate in Pittsburgh has become one of the highest in the country. Moreover, continuation of the Kline policies will undoubtedly mean a further increase in the levy; for the city this year received $1,300,000 of revenue from extraordinary sources which will not be available next year.

To stem this extravagance, to restore the efficiency of the police bureau and re-establish honest government are Pittsburgh's most urgent needs.

The Sun-Telegraph believes the best way to oppose the Kline policies is to elect P. J. McArdle, John D. Houston, Robert Garland and Charles Anderson to Council.

Much the same issues figure in the contest for the two Republican nominations for County Commissioner, for which there are four outstanding contenders.

Joseph G. Armstrong stands, like Kline, for the "spoils system" and the other evils of machine politics from which the people are struggling to free themselves. Armstrong has held public office for 35 years and has many noteworthy achievements to his credit. Without belittling his record, the Sun-Telegraph feels that because of his identification with the old order and its strong-arm methods he should be retired to private life.

Col. Charles C. McGovern has earned another term as County Commissioner by the zeal and energy with which he has defended the people's welfare and fought against crookedness and extravagance. The people need a "watchdog" like McGovern in the County Commissioners' office.

Senator William D. Mansfield has disappointed many of those who were for him at the outset of the campaign. Instead of speaking out frankly he has followed a gumshoeing policy. However, it should not be overlooked that he has had a long and honorable career of public service, and has usually been on the right side in thought and action.

Senator James J. Coyne is the fourth contender. There is nothing in his life or record to justify his being considered for this high office.

It is important in the judiciary contest that the candidates shall be considered individually on their merits. On that account the slate of the seven sitting judges who are running on a "one for all and all for one" platform should be ignored.

It is important also that candidates should be elected who are under no obligation to the corrupt Republican machine and who will, therefore, be free to sentence to prison grafters and election crooks and racketeers connected with the machine.

Judge Samuel H. Gardner and City Solicitor Charles Waldschmidt, who are among the candidates for the seven places to be filled on the Common Pleas Court bench, are organization politicians. Waldschmidt is very close to Kline. Gardner, as district attorney, was not sufficiently aggressive in the prosecution of racketeers and election crooks.

Judge Joseph Stadtfeld has a splendid record and should be returned to the bench. Alexander P. Lindsay is capable and independent. Thomas M. Marshall and Raymond D. Evans merit election.

There are four places to be filled on the County Court bench. Judge Sara M. Soffel ought to be everybody's choice for one of the places. M. A. Musmanno, a brilliant and learned lawyer, and a man who has proved by his service in the Legislature that he puts justice—social justice and individual justice—above everything else, should have one of the other seats.

One of the most important of the county offices to be filled is that of District Attorney. District Attorney Andrew T. Park is the candidate of all factions of the Republican machine and is also favored by the racketeers, notably John Volpe, of Wilmerding, the Al Capone of the eastern part of the county. Park has been laggard in the prosecution of racketeers and dishonest public officials.

Ralph H. Smith, opposing Park on the Independent Republican ticket, has commended himself to the favorable consideration of the voters by his straightforward discussion of the issues. He has had experience as a public prosecutor, having been assistant district attorney, assistant United States Attorney, and deputy attorney general, the position he now fills.

The corrupt Republican machine will muster its full strength at the polls tomorrow. But it can be beaten if the uncontrolled citizens, especially those who ordinarily fail to vote, will do their duty.

Vote early. Vote for decency and honesty.

Bootleg!

(Copyright, 1931.)

Smuggled liquor is not the only kind of contraband which Federal officials have to fight.

Events of the last few days have exposed the existence and operations of an alien smuggling ring, responsible for the presence of a vast number of undesirable aliens in this country.

According to the officials, this ring has "bootlegged" SEVERAL HUNDRED THOUSANDS of deportable foreigners into the United States in 10 years, deriving a profit of $20,000,000.

Nothing could be more dangerous to American institutions. No form of lawlessness should be extirpated more ruthlessly.

Effects of Prohibition

By Brand Whitlock

(From the "Little Green Shutter," by Brand Whitlock, published by D. Appleton & Co.)

(Copyright, 1931, by Brand Whitlock.)

HASTE to hustle Humanity into instant perfection has brought on results more deplorable than any that the saloon or the abuse of alcoholic stimulants ever produced.

The fact is that prohibition does not come up to its glittering prospects. One of the great miracles it was going to perform was to do away with crime. But under it, and as a direct result of it, crime has increased in apalling proportions.

To begin with, prohibition has invented, by legal definition, a number of artificial crimes, and crowned our prisoners with those who commit them, and that, too, at a time when in other nations of the world, without our moral pretentiousness but with greater practical sense in the administration of law, the prison population is declining.

But this isn't all by any means. Under prohibition crime has been raised into a system with all the arrogance and audacity of a vested interest, a wealthy industry established by the bootleggers, in association with criminal organizations that have wide and sinister ramifications in the political and official world. This interest is so powerful that the law has all but broken down.

MURDEROUS gangs, fighting over the tremendous profits of the bootlegging business, engaged daily in machine gun warfare in the streets of the large cities, and they have developed so many new forms of lawlessness and violence that a new vocabulary is necessary to define them, with the result that our language has been enriched by such euphonious terms as "booze" and "hooch," "hi-jacking" and "racketeering," and such elegant euphemisms as "bumping him off," "taking him for a ride" and "putting him on the spot."

And as the most fantastic and amazing of all the grotesque anomalies of prohibition, the prohibitionists and the bootleggers are united in an unnatural solidarity to keep prohibition on the statute books.

And as if all this were not enough, a kind of clericalism has set itself up as an auxiliary to the government, and daily inspects, if it does not actually manipulate, the dark apparatus of prohibition on the ground that it is its duty to regulate public morals.

WORST of all, of course, is the callous and cynical sabotage of liberty.

A vast bureaucracy—that most pestiferous of modern tyrannies—has been set up; the land swarms with spies and informers, and agents provocateurs ply their ignoble and degrading trade.

Every day we read of outrages—raids, wanton killings, violations of domicile, searches and seizures; a man's house is no longer his castle; a respectable citizen hardly dare drive out in his motor car without the risk of being shot down on suspicion, or see a friend off at the pier without being subjected to the indignity of having an agent collar him and slap him all over the body to see if he has a flask of whisky concealed about his person.

But we ignore the implications of these things, grow indifferent and blase, and sink into a supine and fatalistic acquiescence. We fail to realize that if this sort of thing goes on, it must, in the end destroy the principle of liberty.

FOR, while all dictatorships make their debut with the same suave and benevolent pretensions to virtue, they are all alike the slaves of an irrefragable law; they must follow their own curve and continually devise new and more drastic tyrannies to justify and perepetuate the old.

As the reformer is seen going about his self-appointed task, confidently seeking the absolute in a world of relativities, it is often urged in defense or in excuse of him that he is animated by a noble and altruistic purpose, that he is trying to make people good.

Well, perhaps. And yet he ought to know by this time that there is no way of making people good, or of forcing them to be good. The catchpoll and the beadle cannot do it. And no scheme can be devised by which men may be made to live in a moral vacuum from which temptation shall have been scientifically exhausted.

GOODNESS doesn't come in that way. Goodness comes from within, not from without. Compulsory abstinence, for instance, is no great virtue. If it were, the penitentiary would offer the best patterns of the ideal life.

The man who is sober only because he can't get anything to drink might as well, for all moral purposes, be drunk. He has no more grit or backbone—that is, no more character—than he ever had, and character is all that really counts.

The trouble with the reformer is that, like everybody in this scientific age, he has a complex, and the very worst of all complexes—the moral superiority complex; he wishes to standardize conduct, taste and opinion, to make everybody over on a model of which he offers himself as the not always attractive example.

There is nothing more likely to be resented than a patronizing, smug, self righteousness. Moral pretentiousness is the deadly sin. There ought to be a law against it.

Marry-Go-Round

Emotional Starvation

Women complain a wife is becoming hard-boiled when men are becoming soft-boiled. Chivalry, sentiment, and all the finer and more beautiful phases of love are disappearing.

Men are suffering from emotional starvation, because they have nothing to emote over to idealize or to cover with their illusions.

All of which if true is sad. But he does not shed one tiny tear for WOMAN'S emotional starvation!

Whether she has brought it on herself or not, woman's sufferings must be 10 times greater than man's.

For a man may consume more clams, roast beef and potatoes than a woman can, but NO man can consume food or hunger for and relish half so much EMOTION as a woman does.

A woman simply MUST emote! The most hard-boiled flapper MUST have her portion of sentiment, love and romance!

A woman MUST have beauty in her life and in love affairs. Men would never have stopped for courtship and romance if woman had not demanded it of them.

Man would still be grabbing woman by the hair, knocking her senseless and dragging her back to his tent if woman had not insisted on his learning a more subtle and graceful way of expressing his love, and gradually trained him up to the finesse of courtship and the self-sacrifice of a big church wedding.

To him, love-making is just a lot of red-tape through which he has to go in order to win the woman he wants. And one of the hardest crosses he has to bear is woman's propensity for deluging him with her emotions.

If woman is deliberately reducing the amount of red-tape and letting man slip back into his aboriginal methods of wooing, it is SHE, not he, who will do the suffering. If she is turning love from a fencing match into a wrestling match, it is SHE who is going to get hurt.

* * *

If she is bartering away all the beautiful accessories of love-making, cutting all the sweets out of her sentimental diet, it is SHE who will die of emotional starvation. Woman is cheating herself!

* * *

For a man's soul can feed on ambition, work, play or physical pleasures—but a woman lives on, by and for LOVE, alone! And when the last sweet illusion has died out of men's eyes, it is WOMAN who will weep over its grave!

Isn't It So?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and a telegram from Irvin Cobb to spend the week at his Easthampton estates which I would rather do than anything I know if it were possible. So calling at Nellie Revell's hotel but she away and in the lobby came upon Eugene Walter, the playwright.

Walking through 45th street I suddenly discovered my shoes unmated, one brown, one black, and had a polisher turn the brown one black to keep from being twitted at home. Then to a musicale to hear young Ernest Charles sing his own tunes and as talented a young composer as I know.

In the evening to a dinner and John Charles Thomas and his wife there, also Vincent Lopez with his polish of a Spanish grandee, Leon Leitrim the dancer, and Aubrey and Peggy Hoyt Eads. Home late and gorged on a tin of imported sardines and a beaker of iced milk.

A psychologist tells me most of the momentous decisions of the world are made by individuals and nations between 10 a. m. and 12 noon. That is the period when human courage is notched highest. Low ebb of indecision is between 4 and 5 in the afternoon. That is the hour, by the way, when many husbands try to decide whether they will have to stay late at the office, etc.

* * *

In Wall street these days bright young men of the banks and bond houses refer to their particular institution as "the shop." One went a bit further today on the phone. In speaking of his magnificently marbled and coppered satisfactory he said: "Next time you are below Fulton pop into the hovel."

"Spike" Hunt is a sharp example of my firm belief no endeavor begets tolerance like travel. A seasoned globe trotter is invariably detached from the feisty pettiness of little minds. He cannot digest silly jealousies and meannesses so often clinging to those in a groove. Hunt has rounded out perhaps the fullest travel life of any contemporary scribbler, touching port at every civilized country on the globe. Yet he never fails to read his Alexis Ill., weekly from "kiver to kiver."

Few plays are announced for autumn. Producers are marking time. Usually at this period a hundred or more shows are in preparation. Today there are not 20. The Follies and Vanities seem the outstanding hits.

I stopped in at a Child's offering all one may eat for 60 cents. The experiment proved an interesting study in mob psychology, increasing receipts in instances 10 per cent. It further proved only 15 per cent of the public is greedy. The other 85 ate with no greater gusto than when paying for each item. At first restaurants furnished free carbonate of soda for gluttons, but had no calls. The clientele for the most part when I was there seemed elderly men down on their luck and young folk obviously out to gourmandize.

* * *

A hark back to the good old days in cheaper restaurants and cafeterias is 5-cent tea, coffee and milk. And hooray: one chain offers pie a la mode for 10 cents.

Food prices in cafes of the high shots, as a general thing, have been lowered but little. Desserts that were 60 are now 50 cents, and a few meats are shaded from $1.50 to $1.30. The excuse is that many cafes are paying boom day overhead and, with depression patronage, to cut prices would close them.

* * *

It occurs to me that in all the "wine brick" furore I have yet to hear anyone say it makes a good or bad drink. In the same fashion it strikes me that, despite its rage, I've seen no one yet—save Helen Menken—who looked chic in an Empress Eugenie hat. And my secret survey shows it is on its way out.

* * *

Today on the phone a drawling "dropping" gentleman introduced himself as Mat. Rutherford Gilford Gilpen, of Georgia, and so mighty is the power of suggestion that ever since I have been sitting around panting for a mint julep.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I believe in God.

I believe that God made men and has a plan for men.

I believe that it is a good and beautiful plan and that it will eventually work out when men become grown up.

Why do I believe? Because I NEED to believe. Never have I needed to believe in God and goodness as greatly as I need now. For these are ugly times—hideously confused times. Never has evil seemed so strong, nor viciousness so sure of itself. And so I NEED to believe that there is something stronger than evil, surer than viciousness.

I need to believe that the decency in human life will triumph over the indecency. I need to believe that a deliberate Power brought man up out of the mud and that that Power is still on the job. Brutal as these times are, that Power has seen times more brutal. Gangster wars — murdered babies—starving workers—these are terrible things. But they have happened before. They have always been happening since life began. Yet life has gone on, gone on and up. And beauty and truth, love and courage have survived.

I NEED to believe that these things will always survive . . . that the Power which made them will not let them perish.

I believe because I need to believe. If I don't believe, I'm licked. I may seem to be doing nicely. I may hold a good job and live in a fine house and have delightful friends, but in the secret places of my heart, where my real life goes on, I'll be licked. For life doesn't mean anything to me unless I can believe there's a Power above it and a plan behind it and a goal ahead.

And so, because I NEED to believe I have DECIDED to believe.

Once upon a time I did not know that one could "decide to believe." I thought that belief came spontaneously or not at all. I'm wiser now. I have found that you can WILL TO BELIEVE . . . that you can choose doubt or faith, just as you please. It is not easy for me to have faith. I do not possess a sentimental or credulous nature. I'm a born doubter. But doubt poisons me. It kills everything that is gentle and joyous and strong in my spirit. Doubt makes me cold and hard and bitter.

And, since this is so, why should I choose to doubt? Why should I not, rather, choose to believe? It is as easy and as reasonable to believe as it is to doubt. There are as many reasons for believing that there is a God as there are reasons for believing that there isn't.

"Then how can you explain those gangster killings?" You say.

I can explain them far easier than you can explain the stars, stranger . . . or the love of a mother . . . or the unselfish heroism of a Father Damien. It is easy to explain a gangster. He is simply an expression of the mud from which we all are made. All wild animals are gangsters. Every human being is a gangster—while in the savage state or in infancy. Gangsters are no riddle.

But good men are riddles. Love and courage and honor are riddles. How can one explain their presence in our stupid, brutal flesh? You can't explain them unless you believe in God. You can't explain them, but you can contemplate them and be comforted by them and believe in them. When I think of these mysteries, my fear and my despair drop away. All life seems greater—and I want to go on a little further. And so I choose to think of them. I choose to believe in their power rather than in the power of evil.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

For one reason or another you are not satisfied with the class of society in which you find yourself.

You have tried to gain entrance a step higher, but have been unsuccessful in interesting what you consider the next group.

Your income is sufficient to permit yourself and family to dress and enjoy the privileges that the members of this particular grade of society has.

Your home is on a par with those in the circle you desire to enter.

In breeding and education you know you are the equal if not the superior of most of them.

It is puzzling to you that they don't seem to accept you.

Perhaps this little crowd have been friends of long standing, their circle is as large as they care to make it.

Because of many years of camaraderie they feel more comfortable and easy together than they would if you or any other stranger were taken in.

They can talk more freely and understand each other without explanations which must be made occasionally to an outsider.

Perhaps some of the things they do might prove displeasing or possibly shocking to you and they know it, and their own crowd won't comment on them.
